FRANCE WILL NOT DISARM TILL GERMANS MEET TREATY

Ex-enemies Must Comply With All Conditions, Is Edict Of Paris

TROOPS TO VILNA

International Force Of Troops To Guarantee Fair Election

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, November 24.—M. Leon Bourgeois, who has completely recovered from his recent indisposition, speaking before the Commission on Disarmament, declared that France could never disarm until two essential preliminary conditions had been fulfilled.

It would be necessary, firstly, for Germany to have complied with all the conditions of the Treaty of Versailles, especially those dealing with armament; and secondly that an organisation for control and investigation should have been established and have entered upon its duties.

CALL FOR TROOPS

Geneva, November 24.—The Council of the League of Nations is inviting the Scandinavian States to send detachments into the Vilna district. Bulgaria, Austria, Finland, Albania and Luxemburg will probably be admitted to the League of Nations.

Geneva, November 24.—There was no public meeting of the Assembly of the League of Nations today. On the other hand, the work of the Commissions was in full swing.

The Commission on Naval, Military and Air Force matters met at two o'clock to study, in accordance with the Treaty of Versailles, the problem of the reduction of armaments. The French delegates, General Bayelle, Admiral Lacaze and General Dumesnil arrived.

Finally, the Council of the League is itself sitting regularly. It took up the Armenian question, and particularly the proposals made by M. Viviani on Monday last.

FRENCH WIRELESS

Shanghai, November 25.—The following official French wireless message, transmitted by the Bordeaux wireless station, was received by the French Municipal wireless station here this morning:

Geneva, November 24.—There was no public sitting of the Assembly of the League today.

The Council of the League met at 10:30 a.m., and first dealt with the resolution of the Assembly, requesting it to consult with the various Governments concerned, with a view to some Power being entrusted with taking the necessary steps to put an end to the hostilities between Armenia and the Kemalists.

After discussing the method by which the unanimous resolution of the Assembly should be carried out, the Council instructed the Secretary-General to submit a proposal by telegraph to the several Governments.

CONSIDER PLEBISCITE

The Council then considered the organisation of a plebiscite in the Vilna territory. M. Voldemar, representing Lithuania and M. Askenisky, representing Poland, were introduced and invited to take seats in the Council Chamber.

The President communicated to these delegates the decision of the Council to send to the Vilna territory an international force of about 1,800 men, in order to ensure a sincere expression of public opinion, and asked the two Governments concerned to come to an agreement in delimiting the area in which the plebiscite should take place. The Lithuanian and Polish representatives then communicated to the Council the views of their Governments.

The Aland Islands Commission, which reached Stockholm a fortnight ago, has sent a telegram stating that it was about to leave for Finland. It is expected that the Commission will spend ten days in visiting the islands, and will then return to Paris to prepare its report for the Council of the League.

Cathedral Is Thronged For Double Observance Of National Holidays

Thanksgiving And Tercentenary Anniversary Of Pilgrims' Landing Celebrated Here By British And Americans Together

Yesterday's double observance of the American Thanksgiving Day holiday and the observance of the tercentenary anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, Massachusetts, at a service at Holy Trinity Cathedral yesterday afternoon probably was unique in the history of Shanghai.

In accordance with a proposal advanced some weeks ago when plans for the Thanksgiving Day observance were being considered, Britons of the community accepted the invitation to join and make of the event a double observance of Thanksgiving Day and of the anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims, and as an outcome the Cathedral was filled to overflowing at the service yesterday. Every seat as well as chairs in the aisles were occupied while many who came late were obliged to stand.

ARTISTIC DECORATIONS

Decorations that had been put in place by a committee of the American Woman's Club, consisting of greenery surrounding the interior columns and banked masses of carnations in the chancel, were altogether tasteful and artistic. Among prominent Britons who attended were Sir Everard Fraser, British Consul-General, Judge Skinner Turner of the British Supreme Court and Col. R. Marr Johnson, Commandant of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps. Judge C. S. Lobingier of the United States Court for China, United States District Attorney C. P. Holcomb, Consul-in-Charge Mahlon F. Perkins and other American officials and members of the American consular staff were present.

Due to the illness of Mr. R. B. Hurry, organist of The Cathedral, a change in program was made necessary, and with but little preparation Mr. Gardner Tewksbury took part at the organ wholly effectively.

The opening item of the program, the organ prelude, was followed by an eloquent prayer by Rt. Rev. F. R. Graves D.D. after which the big gathering stood to sing "Harvest Home."

ITEMS OF PROGRAM

The address on the subject, "The Tercentenary Anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims" then was given by the Rev. A. N. Rowland, pastor of the Union Church. Miss Myra B. Olive then sang the solo, "Song of Thanksgiving" after which President Wilson's proclamation, as publish-

New Premier Of Greece To Negotiate Directly On Ex-King's Behalf

(Reuter's Service)

Athens, November 23.—The Government press announces that the new Premier, M. Rhallys, intends to visit the allied capitals and open direct negotiations with the allied governments regarding the situation in Greece. It is also stated that, in order to prove the sincerity of its feeling toward the Entente, the Greek Government is ready to give any guarantees that may be demanded.

Paris, November 23.—Official circles state that in view of the postponement of the Greek plebiscite to December 5 there will probably be no official Anglo-French declaration on the Greek situation immediately, as it might possibly provoke regretable disturbances in Athens.

They point out that the first duty of the Allies is to examine the Treaty of Sevres before proceeding further.

WILL BE WARNED

Paris, November 24.—At the close of the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies, the Premier, M. Leygues, made a statement on the subject of the situation in Greece, pointing out that France reserved her liberty of action. She did not, he said, wish to interfere with the domestic affairs of Greece, but if that country recalled to the throne a former sovereign who was the accomplice of the enemies of the Allies, Greece must be warned that she could no longer expect the same sympathy or the same co-operation from them.

The Premier emphasised the fact that the French Government was acting in concert with its British ally and that he would shortly have an interview with Mr. Lloyd George for the purpose of settling a definite course of action.

Paris, November 24.—It is definitely decided that the Premier, M. Georges Leygues, will leave Paris tomorrow morning for London, where he is to confer with Mr. Lloyd George. The Premier will be accompanied by M. Philipe Berthelot, Secretary General for Foreign Affairs; M. Kammerer, M. Carteron and M. Massigli.

RUSE SUSPECTED

Paris, November 24.—Prince Andre and Prince Christophor have arrived in Athens. General Dousmanis will not take command of the Helenic mission to Constantinople but will be appointed aide-de-camp to Queen-Regent Olga.

The French press points out that the tactics which will probably be adopted at the next election will be to ask the people to vote at the same time for ex-King Constantine and M. Venizelos, but

Honan Needs $2,000,000 To Meet Famine Demands

BY HENDON M. HARRIS

Kaifeng, Honan, Nov. 21, 1920.—As secretary of the Famine Relief Committee organised by the civil and military governors of the Province a good deal of correspondence has passed through my hands that throws light on the conditions prevailing at the present time.

The needs in the famine-stricken areas are so great as to pass far beyond the ability of the committee to meet even a tithe of the needs. It is estimated that over 40 counties are affected of which 25 face desperate conditions.

At least 3,500,000 people are in need of help and it is estimated that 1,500,000 of these are absolutely destitute.

The area affected comprises a large part of the three prefectures north of the Yellow River, a large district in the west and a great region near the Han River in the far southwest of the province.

MILLIONS ARE NEEDED

At a conservative estimate millions of dollars will be needed to tide over until the harvest. The harvest of wheat promises to be excellent provided the amount of moisture necessary in the form of snow and rain is not lacking but the harvest is yet distant many months and in the meantime myriads are doomed to certain death by starvation in spite of our utmost efforts.

The situation is complicated by the presence in some districts of large and well-armed bands of robbers. They even dared to kidnap the county magistrate of a hsien which is on the railway and hold him for a three thousand dollar ransom. Business is at a standstill in the mountain districts because of these pests. Their number is likely to increase rather than diminish.

Only a few days ago 200 soldiers on account of pay being in arrears absconded from Hsuchow, 180 south of Chengchow at the junction of the Lung Hai and Kin Han roads and went through the country in bands plundering and robbing on the way.

MANY ROBBERIES

I have just returned from a country trip into Wei Shi Hsien and when the magistrate there learned that I was in his district he was greatly alarmed and insisted that I return at once to Kaifeng under armed escort and on the road home I learned of robberies on the main road in open daylight within 15 miles of the capital city of the province

TRAMWAYS HEAD BACK AFTER TRIP OF STUDY ABROAD

Settlement System Compares Favorably With Those Of West, Says Mr. McColl

GETS HEAVY TEST HERE

Local Lines Handle More Passengers Per Mile Than Home Companies

Mr. D. McColl, General Manager of the Shanghai Tramways Company, has returned to Shanghai after absence of nearly ten months during which time he studied transportation conditions in America and the United Kingdom.

Taking all things into consideration, Mr. McColl thinks that the tramway service of the International Settlement compares very favorably with those of other cities in the countries which he visited. This particularly in view of the unusual stress to which the local service is put. The Shanghai Tramways system, Mr. McColl cited as an example, carries 7,000,000 people per mile of route per annum. This is two or possibly three, times as great as the volume of service given on lines in cities such as Manchester or Liverpool, which are places most capable of being compared to Shanghai in this respect.

The accident rate in this city also compares most favorably with that of the large cities of America and the United Kingdom, Mr. McColl said, being in fact remarkably low when local conditions are considered.

Mr. McColl was particularly impressed while in the United States by the surface car system and service in Philadelphia. The Pennsylvania city is one of the "old style" cities of America, with narrow streets comparable in some ways to the thoroughfares over which the tram lines run in Shanghai. There the "one way" system is brought to a [illegible] ciency, single [illegible] rule, with reverse traffic passing over different [illegible]

Everywhere he went, Mr. McColl said, he found visible the effects which the war has had upon tramway transportation. Shortage of rolling stock is one of the handicaps under which practically all of the lines are suffering.

Figures for the past few months show the growing need for expanded facilities in tramway transport in Shanghai and it is the hope of the company that action will shortly be taken by the Municipal Council which will allow starting on the comprehensive scheme of extension which the company has already proposed.

Disposal Of War Material Is Subject Of Ambassadors

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, November 24.—The Ambassadors' Conference met this morning, M. Jules Cambon presiding. Great Britain was represented by Mr. R. C. Lindsay, Charge d'Affaires. The conference finished consideration of a series of questions bearing on the methods by which war material is to be disposed of.

Marshal Foch and General Weygand represented the Inter-Allied Supreme War Counsel at the meeting. M. Mauclere and M. Ameglio representing the Reparations Commission.

The question of compensation of the members of the Commissions of Control, in Bulgaria and Austria was referred to a financial committee. A technical committee was charged with the consideration of the reply to be made to a note from Germany on the subject of her commercial regime.

Reds At Outs With Turk Nationalists

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, November 24.—According to advices published in the French press, relations between the Bolsheviki and the Turkish Nationalists, under Mustapha Kemal, appear to be very strained. The questions of Batum and Azerbeijan are reported to have bred discord between them.

Paris, November 24.—Information received from a Turkish source is to the effect that violent actions which have taken place on the Armenian front have gone in favor of the Armenians. The situation of the Kemalists is quite bad in the region of Adana.

RUSSIAN CONSUL SEES HOPE FOR RUSSIANS IN CHINA

Mr. V. Grosse, Back From Peking, Says Government Is Making Few Concessions

Mr. V. Grosse, Consul-General for Russia under the Temporary Government, who has returned to Shanghai from Peking following negotiations regarding the status of Russians in China, sees some faint rays of hope in the situation and expresses a determination to stick to his post here in an interview printed in the Russian Echo yesterday.

"It is perfectly useless to hope to maintain the position which formerly existed," Mr. Grosse said. "The facts must be faced. The decree has been issued and has to be considered.

CHANGES FOR BETTER

"But changes for the better have been made as regards our position and perhaps, with general efforts, we will succeed in creating something acceptable to all of us in Shanghai.

"I must add that the Chinese Government, though reluctantly, continues to make concessions. [illegible] Peking and [illegible] especially on the one from Shanghai.

"As regards the advisers for Russian affairs, the Chinese Government has already begun to put their proposals into effect. Mr. Belchenko, the Consul-General, has been invited to be adviser at Hankow and Mr. Sokoloff, the secretary of the Consulate at Tientsin, has been invited to act in that city."

WILL NOT LEAVE

Touching on his election as a member of the Revisionary Commission of the Chinese Eastern Railway, Mr. Grosse said:

"You can assure all Russians in Shanghai that I have no intention at all of leaving the Russian colony at this critical time. I will do my duty to the end, whatever it may cost me. Should all my endeavors to remain at the head of the service entrusted to me by the Temporary Government prove in vain and should the community consider that it would be in its interest that I should quit my post, then I will leave the Consulate-General and go away to Peking or Harbin to take up the new appointment. It was only after the Railway Administration had agreed to the conditions that I consented to be nominated a member of the Revisionary Commission."

KAPPELISTS IN BATTLE WITH CHINESE ARMY

Russians Refuse To Give Up Arms Upon Arrival At Manchuli

Peking, Nov. 25.—A Harbin telegram under date of November 24 states that the Bolshevist commander, in his negotiations with the Chinese for the creation of a neutral zone in the vicinity of Manchuli, states that the Bolsheviki have no intention of entering Manchuria.

Four thousand Kappelist troops in Manchuli resisted the Chinese when the latter ordered them to disarm themselves. A pitched battle resulted in the death of many Chinese soldiers.

Colonel Izome, the Japanese commander, and General Semenoff passed Harbin on November 23 incognito en route to the East.

(Staff Wire To The China Press)

Hankow, Nov. 25.—Gen. Sun Chuan-fang, commander of the Hupeh first division, today laid seige to the residence of the new civil governor, Gen. Hsia Shou-kang at Wuchang. General Hsia was rescued by Gen. Doo Shih-chun, the Hankow Defense Commissioner, in the evening and fled to the International Concession here. His taking over charge at Wuchang was opposed by the militarists.

Tuchun Tsao Kun of Chihli and his aide, Gen. Wu Pei-fu have sent delegates here to smooth over the deadlock. The Wuchang and Hankow Chambers of Commerce contemplate trying to persuade Gen. Wang Chuan-yuan to accept Gen. Hsia as civil governor.

Holiday Tragedy On Nebraska Farm

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Pender, Nebraska, Nov. 25.—G. H. Dinklage, a farmer of reputed wealth, killed his wife and three children with a hatchet, badly wounded their baby and then hanged himself. It is believed that the despondency over the decrease in the value of land and reduction of price of farm products was the cause of the action.

Servants stated that the hatchet was intended to kill the Thanksgiving goose.

GERMAN SCIENCE IMPERILED BY LACK OF FUNDS

Bavaria To Remain Part Of Germany Asserts Head Of Diet

(Reuter's Service)

Shanghai, Nov. 25.—The following items form part of a German propoganda message picked up by wireless in Shanghai from the station at Nauen, and are issued with all reserve:

Berlin, Nov. 24.—Herr Koch, the Minister for Home Affairs, held a reception in the Reichstag building, which was largely attended by members of Parliament and representatives of the technical arts and sciences in order to discuss the precarious position of German science.

Herr Koch pointed out that German science was in terrible straits through lack of means, and was faced with a complete breakdown. He declared that the whole nation must be stirred up to collect funds, while the Government had already donated [illegible] and also for raising funds for the education of the rising generation.

Berlin, Nov. 24.—At a meeting of charity organisations of all parties and religious faiths, a "German Children's Relief Union" was formed. Herr Ebert, the German President, addressed the meeting, and dwelt upon the cruel privations of German children. He especially expressed his thanks for the contributions from America, Switzerland, Scandinavia and Holland.

Berlin, Nov. 24.—At the closing session of the Congress of Christian Trade Unions at Essen, the President of the Bavarian Diet protested against the rumors of an alleged separatist movement in Bavaria, and stated that neither the Bavarian people nor the Government dreamed of dissociating themselves from the best of Germany.

Austin, Texas, Nov. 19.—Legislation designed to prevent Japanese from acquiring the right to own land in Texas will be introduced in the next session of the Texas Legislature when the House of Representatives meets in January, Senator P. H. Bledsoe announced today.

He said that the suggested Bill will be patterned after the California Land Law and declared that, as there were negotiations under way for the establishment of a Japanese colony in the Rio Grande Valley, he would make every legal effort to prevent the creation of this proposed colony.

SINN FEIN ROUND-UP BEGINS IN IRELAND

Barbed Wire Barriers Erected By Raiders At Dublin

LORDS' DEBATE

Home Rule Cause Of Hot Argument In Upper House

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 23.—Wholesale raids and arrests were carried out in Dublin last night. The military threw cordons and barred wire obstructions across the roads leading to the city. Nobody was allowed to pass the barriers, under any circumstances, and all vehicular traffic was stopped.

Men inside the city area were searcheu and a number arrested. Large crowds assembled at the barriers and the military fired a few shots into the air to prevent obstruction.

Following the recent murders of officers in Dublin, the authorities in Ireland have begun a great round-up of Sinn Feiners throughout the country.

Houses and public offices in many places have been raided and numbers of Sinn Feiners have been arrested.

DESTROYER CALLED

A destroyer has gone to Dublin to fetch the bodies of the murdered officers for a public funeral in London.

London, Nov. 23.—Events in Dublin have created the most unfavorable atmosphere for the debate on the second reading of the Home Rule Bill, which began in the House of Lords today. It is felt that the bill, whatever it be, cannot fail be of far-reaching importance [illegible] to Ireland, Great Britain and the Empire.

The most competent observers agree that it is impossible to foretell the result with certainty, hence the Government are undisguisedly endeavoring to obtain a full attendance of members.

The most prominent peers will take part in the debate, including the Lord Chancellor, who opened for the Government, Lord Morly, and Lord Grey of Falloden who is expected to make an especially weighty contribution.

ASKS REFERENDUM

Lord Clifford of Chudleigh has given notice of a motion that the bill be submitted to an Irish referendum in order that it may assume a form acceptable to the Irish.

The division on the second reading is expected to be taken on November 25.

The House of Lords was crowded this evening, the attendance including Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Bonar Law and Sir Edward Carson, round the steps of the Throne.

The Lord Chancellor, Lord Birkenhead, lengthily reviewed the Home Rule Bill, and read a letter from Sir Edward Carson saying that Ulster was prepared to accept the Bill and work it loyally.

The Lord Chancellor denied that the English wanted to deny Irishmen anything to which they were entitled, and emphasised that the scope of the Bill offered Ireland a greater degree of self-government than any Irish leader ever claimed until a Republic was demanded.

FIND VITAL PAPERS

Referring to the events in Dublin, on Sunday, the Lord Chancellor declared that the primary object of the murders was to intimidate the court-martial and to capture documents. A great capture had recently been made of the most secret and vital documents appertaining to the Sinn Fein military and revolutionary organisations, and the authorities intended to make the fullest use of these documents.

The Lord Chancellor said that a secondary object of selecting November 21 for the outrages, was the belief that they would influence a section of the opinion of the Legislature. It was at a critical stage of the Bill in the House of Commons that the attempt on Lord French's life had been made.

The Lord Chancellor declared that the extremists were being beaten, and the issue was already going against them. The other day he was shown a communication from a local Sinn Fein organisation to the Sinn Fein Headquarters asking that the branch be granted dispensation from attacking policemen for two months, because the pursuit had become increasingly dangerous.

If the Bill were not passed, the Lord Chancellor pointed out, the Home Rule Act of 1914 would automatically become operative when the treaty with Turkey was ratified.

ALTERNATIVE IS REPEAL

The only alternative was to repeal the 1914 Act. The Government would not accept responsibility for such a repeal, declared the Lord Chancellor and not a single Unionist Cabinet Minister was prepared to take that course. The only danger to the present Bill was the possibility of a coalition between those who thought the Bill had gone too far, and others who thought that it did not go far enough.

DETAILS OF OUTRAGES

London, Nov. 23.—Details of further dramatic incidents connected with the Sinn Fein massacre of Crown servants in Dublin are arriving.

One officer owed his life to a woman who warned him on the previous night that he was being watched. He managed to take advantage of the information.

His wife's devotion enabled Captain Kenlyside of the Lancashire Fusiliers to escape with a wound in his arm. Mrs. Kenlyside struggled very gallantly with the assassins, and thus frustrated their murderous attempt.

BIG DEATH LIST

The latest advices from Dublin report twenty-eight killed on Sunday, and over seventy wounded.

The military have taken over a part of the City Hall with a view to the accommodation of troops. Officers residing in hotels have been recalled to barracks.

The village of Barna in Galway, near which the body of Father Michael Griffin was found, has been practically burned down. A band of eight cyclists started the conflagration.

New York, Nov. 23.—The Dublin correspondent of the Associated Press telegraphs that the military are tightening their cordon about Dublin and are working toward the center of the city.

MANY ARRESTED

The number of arrests made is huge, but the Government has not as yet divulged the figures. The jails are overflowing with prisoners and it has been necessary to make use of Dublin Castle.

New York, November 23.—The Dublin correspondent of the Associated Press telegraphs that a fight between three Sinn Feiners and their custodians took place in the guardroom of Dublin Castle on Monday morning. It appears that the prisoners in attempting to escape used bombs and rifles, and all three were ultimately shot.

London, November 23.—In the House of Commons, Mr. Asquith will tomorrow propose a motion expressing abhorrence of Sunday's brutal assassinations in Dublin, and condemning the action of the executive in attempting to repress crime by terrorist reprisals, which involve the lives and property of innocent persons, and are contrary to civilised usage.

Seven Opium Dens Raided By Police

Seven opium smoking dens were raided by the Settlement police Wednesday night. Three of the places were in the Louza district, where ten men and two women were placed under arrest. The two women and one man are being held as proprietors of the places and will be tried in the Mixed Court today.

In the Wayside district four houses were raided and six arrests were made, a quantity of opium and smoking paraphernalia being seized.

A search party on Broadway arrested two Chinese who were found to be in possession of five tins of opium.

Engineering Society To Hear Mr. Cooper

Mr. J. S. S. Cooper, M.A., B.Sc., M.I.E.E., will deliver a paper on "The Engineer in China," at the third meeting of the 1920, 1921 session of the Engineering Society of China which will be held Tuesday, November 30, at 5:30 o'clock.

The meeting will be held at the Royal Asiatic Society's rooms, No. 5 Museum Road.

ed in yesterday's issue of THE CHINA PRESS, was read by Mr. Perkins, Acting Consul-General.

Following the hymn "Thanksgiving," sung by the audience standing, the Thanksgiving Day address was delivered by Dr. Luther Freeman, pastor of the Community Church.

After the singing of a selection from "Elijah" by eight voices the service closed with prayer and benediction by the Very Rev. Dean Symons. Those composing the octet were. Mesdames Frederick Tillson, L. P. Kurt, L. E. McLachlin and Messrs. H. H. Cameron, C. D. Ginuque, R. A. Curry and L. C. Perry. A detachment of sailors from American warcraft in harbor and the American Company of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps attended the service.

THANKSGIVING ADDRESS

The Thanksgiving Day address was given by Dr. Luther Freeman and was as follows:

If one would find the beginning of special Thanksgiving days it is necessary to go back of the New England idea supposed to be original to early Hebrew times. As early as 1588 we find a day of Thanksgiving observed in England for the defeat of the Spanish Armada and in Leiden the people observed a day of Thanksgiving on the first anniversary of the lifting of the Seige in 1575. To the Massachusetts Bay Colony, however, must be given the credit for establishing the custom of an annual day for Thanksgiving. This dates from 1633.

The first national Thanksgiving was proclaimed during the Revolution and in 1784 the nation set apart a day of Thanksgiving for the declaration of peace. Since President Lincoln's proclamation of a Thanksgiving day in 1863 our president has issued an annual proclamation and the various states have fallen in line.

This is the season when we are not merely glad, as one might be over mere personal and selfish prosperity, but a day when we give thanks to God for national blessings—the rich common blessings into which we all enter.

I do not know how large a place this custom has in the lives of Britons, but with real Americans it is universal. The soldier in foreign trench or hospital, the traveler in every latitude and longitude, the dweller in the uttermost corner of the world is thinking with us today of the land we love best—our blessed America—and is as grateful.

GRATEFUL FOR PEACE

Shall we specify? We are grateful for peace. War is sometimes necessary. When some selfish greedy egotist assumes that he is appointed to put the world in bondage to gratify the lust of power. It will be some time before we shall have another such provocation.

The two great nations represented in this service are providentially appointed to bring to the world this glorious gospel of peace. For more than a hundred of years we have lived side by side, throbbing with industry, growing in wealth and power, spurred on by great national ambitions, but living in peace.

The Canadian border without a battleship or fort is an argument 3,000 miles long demonstrating a possibility of civilised nations living in perpetual peace. Our common ancestry, our common religious faith, our common civilisation, which has placed us in the van of the nations, now permits us to lead the world into universal peace.

In Europe representatives of the League of Nations are arriving at this worthy goal. We thank God for peace within our own borders and the promise of peace among the nations of the world.

We thank God that America means opportunity. We believe that no land is so rich in opportunity or so democratic in its blessings as the U.S. of America.

FLAGS STAND FOR JUSTICE

No governments in human history have so blessed the world as America and Great Britain. Those flags stand everywhere for liberty under law and justice for all.

We glory in our great domain, great inland seas, mighty rivers, wide rich plains and inexhaustible mines of useful and precious metals but our chief glory is in the fact that every man has a chance. There is nothing in his ancestry to shape or limit the attainment of any American boy.

We recognise that this has come to us through the sacrifice, toil and heroism of the centuries.

The Roman legions teaching the Carbonic world the civilizing power of law—the long centuries of struggle that welded the warring tribes of Britain into a nation; the Magna Chartar and King John, Cromwell and his Ironsides, the Pilgrim and the Puritan, no tongue can enumerate the sources from which have come the elements out of which we have moulded the civilization in which we glory today. And we clearly see that this heritage imposes upon us a debt of gratitude to the past that can be paid only by making our biggest possible contribution to the betterment of the nations yet to be.

We Americans in this great nation of China are most auspiciously circumstanced. We are surrounded by the British to whom we owe so much for past contributions and present protection and confront the problems of this nascent republic which we must count it our duty and privilege to serve if we would pay our debt to the heroic past.

We are thankful for the religious significance of this day. However, we may have frequently denied the fact in our behavior we were at the beginning, are now and must continue to be a religious people. The Pilgrims came to Plymouth and the Puritans to Boston in the name of God. In the name of God Peter Stuyvesant led the Dutch in establishing the New Amsterdam which under British conquest became New York. The Roman Catholics came to Maryland and the Huguenots to the Carolinas and set up their standards in the name of religion.

Our nation is religious. But, the particular glory of America is in the fact of perfect toleration.

We have no state church and each man may worship according to the dictates of conscience. We are not saying in the spirit of toleration: "I am as good as you are" but in that braver spirit of sympathy and co-operation "you are as good as I am." This two has come to us as the fruit of the heroic struggle of the centuries.

THE PILGRIMS

The Rev. A. N. Rowland's address in which he recounted the events of the great adventure of the band of Britons, who fled from religious persecution three hundred years ago and crossed the Atlantic to America, held the close interest of the big gathering from the first word to the last.

He said in beginning that had he remained in England he would at this time be taking part in a celebration of nine days in observance of the sailing of the pilgrims in the Mayflower, adding that the tercentenary anniversary of the historic event was being celebrated in many widely-separated centers both in England and in America.

With eloquent phrasing he gave an outline of conditions in England that in time led the pilgrims first to seek religious freedom in flight to Leiden, Holland and then after a residence of twelve or fourteen years, longing for a freer and an Anglo Saxon atmosphere, the younger members of the colony set out on the greater adventure that at length brought them late in the year to the bleak New England shore.

TELLS OF TRIALS

He gave then some account of the terrible winter that overtook the hardy pioneers when about half of their number succumbed to illness and exposure and explained that the real test of their faith and of their steadfastness came in the following spring after the first great trial in the new land. It was then, he said, that the chance to return to England on the departing Mayflower was offered them, and they refused to leave.

He said that the term that commonly has come to be used to designate this adventurous band, that of 'the Pilgrim fathers,' was misleading. "It was a young people's affair," he pointed out, for of the 102 that landed from the Mayflower but forty were heads of households. The others were women, children and young men.

The term 'pilgrims,' he said, also was a misnomer, explaining that a pilgrimage is a journey that can be taken only to a definitely established goal over a path trodden by many who had gone before. The band of Britons were not pilgrims, he added, but pioneers who went into the unknown without a fixed goal and as such they came within the great line of such men as Columbus and Livingston and Perry. Theirs was no mere adventure, he continued, but a movement that was the outgrowth of a conviction and though the goal toward which they strove was clouded in doubt their cause remained clear before them.

UPHELD BY FAITH

The conviction that urged the pilgrims forward, he added and which held them steadfast was a thing rooted in faith and he said that some insight into the quality of the love they bore one another is given in an extract from Bradford's journal, which he read and which runs as follows: "In time of most distress there were but six or seven sound persons who spent no pains, not night nor day, to help the sick, who fetched wood, made fires, dressed the meat, clothed and unclothed the helpless and washed their loathsome garments—all willingly and cheerfully, showing therein their true love."

In conclusion he called upon the gathering to pay a silent tribute to those men and women who achieved so greatly and accepting the suggestion the great gathering rose to its feet and stood in silence for a space.

Entertain Sailors With Program At Navy "Y" Building

Some 250 American sailors were delighted with a real "homeside" Thanksgiving celebration at the Navy Y.M.C.A. on Avenue Edward VII, made possible through the co-operation of the American Woman's Club Social Service Department, headed by Mrs. James MacDonell. Sailors from the French cruiser D'Estrees entered into the spirit of the occasion and the 25 attending were accompanied by a jazz orchestra, unique in that some of the instruments were made aboard the ship.

Mr. C. R. Durbin, secretary, and Miss Belle Brock, social secretary, were in charge of the affair and gave the men off the ships an excellent evening.

A cafeteria supper, with turkey, cranberry sauce and other dishes peculiar to an American Thanksgiving Day, was served at 7 o'clock, a moving picture show followed in the gymnasium and the evening closed with a dance. The Filipino orchestra from the U. S. S. New Orleans played for the dancing.

Why Women Grow Old More Quickly Than Men

Greater Percentage of Anaemia—Lack of Iron in the Blood—Among Women Makes Them Lose Much of Their Youth, Beauty and Former Attractiveness, And Become Fretful, Nervous and Run-down—

What Women Need Is Not Cosmetics or Stimulating Drugs But Plenty of Pure Red Blood, Rich In Iron

Physician Explains How Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron, Enriches The Blood, Strengthens The Nerves, Builds Up Physical Power and Often Makes Weak, Pale Careworn Women Look and Feel Years Younger.

Look for the woman who appears younger than a man of the same age and you will find the exception to that vast majority upon whom anaemia—lack of iron in the blood has fastened its grip and is gradually sapping the health, vitality and beauty which every woman so longs to retain. In most cases men safeguard their health better than women by eating coarser foods, being more out-of-doors and leading more active lives, thereby keeping their blood richer in iron and their bodies in better physical condition. The very moment a woman allows herself to become weak, nervous and run-down she is placing a drain upon her whole system which overtaxes the power of the blood to renew wasted tissue and keep active the natural life forces of the body. There are thousands of women who are ageing and breaking down at a time when they should be enjoying that perfect bodily health which comes from plenty of iron in the blood, simply because they are not awake to their condition. For want of iron a woman may look and feel haggard and all run-down—while at 50 or 60 with good health and plenty of iron in her blood she may still be young in feeling and so full of life and attractiveness as to defy detection of her real age. But a woman cannot have beautiful ros. cheeks or an abundance of strength and endurance without iron, and physicians below have been asked to explain why they prescribe organic iron — Nuxated Iron — to help supply this deficiency and aid in building a race of stronger, healthier women.

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital says: "Many a woman who is run-down, easily tired out, nervous and irritable, suffers from iron deficiency and does not know it. I am convinced that there are thousands of such women who, simply by taking Nuxated Iron might readily build up their red corpuscles, increase physical energy, and get themselves into a condition to ward off the millions of disease germs that are almost continually around us. I consider Nuxated Iron one of the foremost blood and body builders—the best to which I have ever had recourse."

Among other physicians asked for an opinion was Dr. George H. Baker, formerly Physician and Surgeon, Monmouth Memorial Hospital, New Jersey, who says: "What women need to put roses in their cheeks and the springtime of life into their step is not cosmetics or stimulating drugs but plenty of rich pure blood. Without it no woman can do credit to herself or to her work. Iron is one of the greatest of all strength and blood builders, and I have found nothing in my experience so effective for helping to make strong, healthy, red-blooded women as Nuxated Iron.

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

Emissary Of Zionists Is Arriving Here Today

Mr. Israel Cohen To Speak In Behalf Of Jewish Palestine

Mr. Israel Cohen, the emissary of the Zionist Organisation, will arrive in Shanghai on the Shinyo Maru from Hongkong today.

Mr. Cohen is on a tour of Australia, India and China for the purpose of raising funds for the furtherance of the Jewish settlement in Palestine.

Plans are being made for a meeting to be held at the Palace Hotel Wednesday afternoon, December 1, at 5 o'clock when Mr. Cohen will speak. A number of prominent men will meet Mr. Cohen upon his arrival today.

RECEPTION IN HONGKONG

While in Hongkong Mr. Cohen was warmly received and spoke before large audiences at the Jewish Recreation Club and the Helena May Institute. At the latter meeting the Governor presided. Mr. Cohen spoke on "The British Mandate for Palestine."

The Zionist emissary has addressed meetings in all the leading cities of Australia and New Zealand.

For the first time in the history of the Jewish national movement the Central Executive of the Zionist Organisation has sent out a special emissary to the Jewish communities of Australasia, India and the Far East. This step has been taken as one of the corrollaries resulting from the acceptance by Great Britain of the Mandate for Palestine with a view to its being reconstituted as the National Home of the Jewish people. The mission with which the emissary is entrusted is to explain the significance of the Peace Conference decision to English speaking communities overseas, to extend and strengthen the branches of the Zionist Organisation, and to raise funds for the furtherance of the Jewish settlement in Palestine.

IS ACTIVE WORKER

Mr. Israel Cohen who has been charged with this distinguished and difficult mission, has been an ardent follower of the Zionist movement since the day when its founder, the late Dr. Theodor Herzl, first issued his call to the Jewish people, and for many years has been an active and prominent worker in the cause. He has had an interesting and notable career as journalist and lecturer, and is the author of the two important works, "Jewish Life in Modern Times" (1914), which has been acknowledged as a standard work on the subject, and "The Ruhleben Prison Camp" (1917), the best and fullest account of the principal British civilian internment camp in Germany.

FORMERLY JOURNALIST

A native of Manchester, and an honors graduate of the London University, Mr. Cohen, who was originally intended for the ministry, elected to adopt journalism as his profession.

He was on the editorial staff of the London Tribune throughout that famous paper's brief career, and then became a free-lance, contributing on Jewish and general subjects to the principal English newspapers. He acted on different occasions as special correspondent for The Times, the Morning Post, the Manchester Guardian, and other papers. He has been the Cologne correspondent of the Morning Post (1910-11), and the Berlin correspondent of the Glasgow Herald (1911-14). Besides writing for the daily press Mr. Cohen has also contributed to the Fortnightly Review, Economic Journal, New Statesman, Nation, etc.

PRISONER OF WAR

In 1909 Mr. Cohen was appointed Secretary of the English Zionist Federation, and in the following year he was called to the Central Office of the Zionist Organisation, then in Cologne, for the purpose of establishing and directing the English department.

With the transference of the Zionist headquarters in 1911 to Berlin Mr. Cohen removed to the German capital, where he was interned in the Ruhleben Camp, from where owing to a breakdown in health, he was allowed in 1916 to return to England.

Soon after recuperating Mr. Cohen began to deliver an illustrated lecture on "Life in the Ruhleben Camp" in all parts of the United Kingdom, and by his lectures and articles he did a great deal to arouse public interest in the welfare of the British civilian prisoners in Germany.

WENT TO POLAND

Upon the establishment of the Central Office of the Zionist Organisation in London Mr. Cohen resumed his official connection with the movement by accepting the post of Director of the Publicity Department, in which capacity he became the first editor of The Zionist Bulletin. In December, 1918, he was sent by the Zionist Executive to investigate the anti-Jewish pogroms in Poland and his first report, which appeared on February 8, 1919, in the Times created a sensation. A few weeks later Mr. Cohen delivered a fuller report at a public meeting, under the chairmanship of Lord Parmoor, at Queen's Hall. He also played a prominent part in the correspondence on the Jewish question in Poland which appeared last year in the London press, and helped considerably in enlightening public opinion upon the plight of Jewry under the Polish regime. Some months later Mr. Cohen contributed a number of striking letters to the Times on the question of "Jews and Bolshevism," and exploded the calumny that designated Bolshevism as a Jewish movement.

DID MUCH WRITING

Mr. Cohen's principal works have already been mentioned above. He has also edited a valuable miscellany, "Zionist Work in Palestine," and "A Zionist Pocket Reference," and written the following pamphlets: "The Zionist Movement," "Literature in the Ghetto," and "A Report on the Pogroms in Poland."

For the Ministry of information during the war Cohen wrote: "Anti-Semitism in Germany," "The German attack on the Hebrew Schools in Palestine," and "The Turkish Persecution of the Jews." A series of sketches of Jewish life in Italy, which he wrote as the result of a visit in 1907, were translated into German and published as a book, "Israel in Italian." He has also been responsible for most of the English publications of the Head Office of the Jewish National Fund.

TOURS UNTIL MARCH

After completing preparations for his present overseas mission Mr. Cohen was suddenly entrusted by the Zionist Executive with a mission to Budapest in order to investigate and report upon the anti-Jewish outrages in Hungary.

Upon concluding this task Mr. Cohen sailed from Trieste for Alexandria, on the way to Palestine, where he spent a few weeks in gathering the latest information for his propaganda tour overseas. Mr. Cohen's mission, which will take him to various parts of the world hitherto not visited by any Zionist representative, will occupy him until about March, 1921.

Colonel Chardigny is making arrangements with the Vilna authorities for the international force to be sent there by the League, and for the general conduct of the plebiscite.

FINANCIAL PLANS

The Provisional Economic Finance Commission, established by the Council of the League to continue the work begun at the Brussels Financial Conference, and to prepare plans for the permanent economic financial organisation of the League, held its first meeting under the presidency of M. One of the chief tasks of this commission will be the preparation of the preliminary organisation for the International Economic Financial Conference recommended by the Brussels Conference. It is anticipated that this conference will be held at Geneva in 1921.

The Provisional Commission will consider this week various questions arising out of the Brussels Conference, notably the method of co-ordinating the information obtained from the various Governments on public finances, and a scheme for facilitating commercial credits, in accordance with the proposals of the Brussels Conference.

ARMENIA DISCUSSED

Geneva, November 23.—There was some very plain speaking, at yesterday's sitting of the Assembly of the League of Nations, over the situation in Armenia.

Mr. Balfour, in a long speech which made a deep impression on the delegates, asked pointedly what the League would do in dealing with people like Mustapha Kemal who disregarded it. No mandatory state, he pointed out, could be found to protect Armenia unless the other states guaranteed it money, men and munitions.

The former French Premier, M. Viviani, in an impassioned oration, expressed regret that the French idea of giving the League an international military force had not been adopted. He urged that the effect of the League's assuming an attitude of impotence would be fatal. Surely, he said, some attempt should be made to negotiate with Mustapha Kemal, and added that he was confident that, even if such negotiations failed, the world would somehow find a way of enforcing its will.

A committee of six was then appointed, with the difficult task of saving Armenia by some means.

Cotton Shipments Light From U.S. Atlantic Ports; Planters Seeking Loans

(Reuter's Service)

New York, Oct. 22 (by mail).—Shipments of cotton from the Atlantic ports thus far this season make a very poor comparison with those for the corresponding period last year.

Savannah's clearances have amounted to only 83,650 bales compared with 186,793 a year ago. Savannah is feeling seriously the diminished Japanese business.

Last year an enormous amount of cotton was shipped to Japan via Savannah and the Panama Canal, whereas comparatively little is expected during the present season.

FARMERS WANT FUNDS

New York, Oct. 22 (by mail).—Farmers of the South and West have not relaxed their efforts to obtain financial accommodations to enable them to hold their cotton off the market for higher prices, despite the rebuffs of Governor Harding of the Federal Reserve Board.

They have enlisted the sympathies of Secretary Meredith of the Department of Agriculture, and before the convention of bankers in Washington, he pleaded their cause, claiming that cotton, at existing prices, lacks more than a third of a billion dollars of bringing as much as it would have brought a year ago, while corn-farmers face a loss of a billion dollars as compared with October last year. The outcome will probably be some measure of relief, possibly through the country banks, as any direct Government aid would probably be resented by other industries which also have seen pronounced shrinkage in prices and would demand special consideration if any other section secured it.

BANK CHARGES WASTE

Meantime, it is interesting to read some of the comments on the farmers' plea for accommodations that are denied to other branches of trade. For instance, the Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va., in a letter to member banks in their districts, declared that "many sections had last Fall enough money in hand to operate the farms and business for twelve months, but wasted a large part of it and then went to the banks for abnormal advances on the assumption that high prices would be permanent." Continuing, the Reserve Bank says: "The manufacturing and agricultural sections of North Carolina and South Carolina could have become financially independent during the last three years if their people had shown sound business judgment, and had held on to a fair proportion of their profit."

This is pretty plain talk, but it is entirely in line with the opinions of many in the trade here, who have close relations with the South. A trade paper, published in Savannah, Ga., insists that Southern banks can give all the aid that is necessary for the rational marketing of the crop, and says the less eager the South is to air the mistakenly supposed vulnerability of its situation, the more ready and substantial support it will be able to secure.

The threat of the Southern farmer now is that he will refuse to plant another crop. Many will stop planting altogether, according to advices reaching here, and many more will materially reduce their acreage. And once they become seriously engaged in other branches of agriculture, it is claimed, it is going to be very hard to win them back to cotton again.

TO INCREASE OUTPUT

This will mean, in the view of many here who are keen observers of world affairs, renewed efforts by consuming countries to produce cotton elsewhere, and the South, if it follows such advice, may wake up some day to find the cotton market largely supplied from other sources.

In an effort to find a market for cotton, especially the lower grades, Southern interests have formed a pool to send a certain amount of the staple abroad, and sell it in Central European markets, in an effort to test the situation as to demand and prices. An export corporation has also been formed for the same purpose but in the present state of European finances long credits must be extended.

LECTURE ON MIAO AT ROYAL ASIATIC

Rev. Robert Powell Tells Of Of Interesting People In Southwest China

The Rev. Robert Powell, missionary to the Miaos in Panhai, Kueichow Province, delivered an illustrated lecture on "The Miao of Southwest China" before a large audience at the meeting of the Royal Asiatic Society yesterday afternoon.

According to Mr. Powell the customs of the Miaos are very different from those of the Chinese. Regarding matrimony the young men and women do their own courting, choose their own husbands and wives, and have established forms of love making.

"There are three courting grounds," said Mr. Powell in the city where Mrs. Powell and I are doing mission work with the China Inland Mission.

"The young men come down to the courting ground, five or six of them with their arms around each others shoulders, and stand singing and swaying back and forth to their songs. They sing of their riches and tell just as many untruths regarding their wealth as do the men in Western countries.

LIKE WESTERN GIRLS

"Five or six giggling girls hear their songs and stroll down to the courting ground where they listen to the young men and believe their words just as the girls in Western lands.

"If the man is from a neighboring village he sends a middleman who asks the young lady if she will marry his friend and return with him to the home of the young man. If she accepts the young man, she quietly leaves her home and goes to his and three days later a delegation from the neighboring village comes and announces the marriage.

"If the village approves of the marriage a three-day feast is enjoyed."

There are from twenty to fifty million Miaos in Southwest China and seventy tribes. More than 70,000 are under Christian instruction and Christianity is spreading so rapidly that it is difficult to meet the demand for teachers.

Premier Of Greece To Negotiate On Ex-King's Behalf

this will merely be a ruse to put the Allies off the scent, with a view to securing the maintenance of the Sevres Treaty.

New York, November 23.—The Paris correspondent of the Associated Press telegraphs:

The Petit Parisien says that Great Britain has already taken steps to inform ex-King Constantine and M. Rhally's that she is absolutely opposed to the return of ex-King Constantine or one of his sons.

ATTITUDE OF ALLIES

Paris, November 23.—An important semi-official announcement, defining the probable attitude of the Allies in connection with the movement to recall ex-King Constantine to the throne of Greece, states that M. Leygues is insisting on the necessity of an Anglo-French declaration before the new Greek Chamber meets on Thursday in order that the latter may be acquainted with the formers' intentions before deciding on a referendum regarding the recall of Constantine.

It is pointed out that the Greek Government will be unable to shelter itself behind the Chamber if it knows beforehand that the result of the referendum will not be accepted.

TREATIES ARE CITED

The statement proceeds to show that the objections to ex-King Constantine's return are based on five treaties, signed between 1827 and 1864, under which France and Great Britain jointly with Russia, are constituted the protecting powers of Greece and the guarantors of her independence.

It refers to the utter impossibility of France and Great Britain permitting the restoration of the ex-King, whose past only too clearly foreshadows his future attitude. They cannot, it points out, permit any further interference by the Hohenzollerns in Greek affairs as this would disturb the order and equilibrium of Eastern Europe.

FOCH AT CONFERENCE

Great Britain and France, it states, will not oppose ex-King Constantine's return with force, nor blockade the Greek coasts, nor force him to return by airplane, but they will inform the Greeks of the numerous political, economic and financial repercussions which a hostile policy might bring in its train.

This, it is felt, is perhaps calculated to temper the Hellenic instability, and France and Great Britain will thus have done everything possible to avoid being confronted with the return of Constantine as an accomplished fact.

Marshal Foch will accompany M. Leygues to London.

BRITISH FOOTBALL CRITICS DECLARE GAME IS MORIBUND; WAR PRINCIPALLY TO BLAME

Amateur Soccerites, Furthermore, Are Deserting To Rugby, Says One—Points To Defeat In Olympic Games—"Neglecting Brain For Footwork," Says Another

By Steve Bloomer

ONE OF ENGLAND'S GREATEST GOAL SCORERS

Association football is not so good as it was before the war. Nor will it reach the pre-war level until, perhaps, two more seasons have passed. Then it may go on to touch a standard of quality higher than ever.

It depends, more or less, upon the recruits who have come into the game recently and those who will come into it later.

When peace play was resumed, we had to begin first-class football all over again. Of the old hands, only a sprinkling remained. Teams were practically new. Most of the players were raw.

It is impossible to reproduce the old quality with craftsmen lacking, through inexperience, all the finer points of their craft. But we have made a promising enough beginning.

Many veterans see only their own playing periods and declare, with shaking heads, that the game has deteriorated since their time in the field. I am not one of these. Football may yet be better than ever. It will be better than ever if more time and closer attention are devoted to ball practice—not to indiscriminate practice, but to practice on a conceived and accepted plan, which has a definite object in view. Practice makes for perfection in football as in every other game.

Bad Amateur Soccer

BY 'OLD FOOTBALL PLAYER'

British Association football no longer stands precisely where it did—at all events in the eyes of the intelligent foreigner.

A certain historic interest still attaches to us in the football world of the Continent. After all, we started the game; we introduced the leather ball to their receptive feet; we used to send over scratch amateur teams to show them how the thing was done. With the result that in the late Olympic Games our Association team was knocked out in the first round by Norway.

The Norwegians were so delighted at having conquered us that they perhaps celebrated the occasion too generously. They succumbed to Italy in the next round. Italy were beaten by Spain and Spain fell before the Czecho-Slovaks; and the Czecho-Slovaks retired in favor of Belgium before half-time in the final round, failing to see matters eye to eye with the referee.

MUST REBUILD

So you can see whereabouts we stand now in the hierarchy of international football. It must be borne in mind, of course, that this was amateur football, not professional.

What has happened to the amateur Soccer player? Somehow or other, the game seems to have lost its hold on him. We have not had for many years now a Corinthian team worthy of comparison with those of twenty or even ten years ago.

The amateur footballer of today turns to the Rugby code instinctively. He may play Association while he is at school or college, but very rarely afterwards. The competition is too severe: if he wants to play regularly for a League club he has either to be a heaven-sent genius or to devote himself thoroughly to the game and nothing but the game.

THE DILEMMA'S HORNS

He has to compete with the men who make it a source of livelihood. If he can do so with success he has to face the temptation of joining their ranks and becoming a professional himself. He might do much worse—but his defection would do nothing to solve the problem that is troubling us.

Amateur Association football is moribund—unless something is done quickly to pull it together.

Football G. H. Q.s.

BY SYDNEY WALTON

Once a player, I am now an enthusiastic spectator. I vibrate to football thrills. I have no inner knowledge of what goes on behind the scenes, and perhaps the suggestion I now offer may have been anticipated.

I will write it down in the report of a conversation I had at Stamford Bridge the other Saturday with a spectator-student. There are spectators and spectator-students. The former simply watch, cheer, and enjoy; the latter, while enjoying the play, observe it with critical closeness.

QUOTH A NEIGHBOR

Said my neighbor in the stand: "Captaincy in cricket seems to be a special study in itself. The whole strategy and tactics are carefully thought out and executed. The team is regarded as a unit, allowance being made for individual brilliance and temperament. But, as far as I can see,

Baseball Fan Can't 'Savvy' Cricket Laws

(From South China Morning Post)

He knew baseball, but no cricket, and the why and wherefore had to be explained patiently.

He was contemptuous of the applause that greeted the fielding.

"Why, the ball came straight at him," he scoffed, "even if it was a bit hard. It was easier for him to stop it than get out of its way!"

We explained that the crowd had to applaud to show savoir faire, and ignoring his "Who's he?" we heard him again later.

"Rotten pitching!" he said. We thought the bowling was good.

"Good! Why man alive, isn't he shooting at the three sticks and hasn't he been two feet away every time? In baseball the crowd'd have him hanged long ago!"

In baseball, we know, the pitcher has to give the batsman a fair chance to hit the ball. It must be thrown over the plate; but we inducted our friend in the intrigue of "keeping on the off" with slips crowded to gather the catches.

A UNIQUE OPINION

"Strikes me as being a bit low down," he said. "If your bowler can bowl crooked the batsman needn't hit 'em and the game never finishes.

"That's if the batsman likes to be as mean as the bowler. It's taking advantage of the batsman's sportsmanship; sort of gambling that he'll get fed up lookin' at them directly and go for one and get out.

"If I was him I'd let the bowler throw 'em crooked till his arm ached and I'd start a crap game with the umpire till the guy got sense. He ought to be made pitch at the sticks."

We assured him it was the same for both sides, and if the batsman would not hit, tactics would promptly change; but after all there was something in his argument.

POTT'S DEFEAT BY HONGKONGER WAS NO FLUKE

Shanghai Tennis Champ Off His Game, Says Writer In Southern Paper

Discussing the singles tennis match played on Saturday, Nov. 13, in the Shanghai-Hongkong Interport series, the South China Morning Post reports as follows:

"The second item of the Hongkong-Shanghai lawn-tennis struggle eventuated at C.R.C. on Saturday, when W. S. A. Pott, Shanghai's singles champion, was pitted against W. M. Lo, Hongkong's second singles representative, runner up for the championship last year.

Lo, admitted to be a very hard man to beat, brought Hongkong out on top to the tune of three straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3, thoroughly deserving his win. He played steadily, with good generalship, and while it must be said that Pott gave many points away with drives that carried on over the back line, trying to do too much in baseline placing, the general opinion was that the better player won.

ALL—OR NOTHING

Pott is brilliant or nothing. At the top of his form the match might have been a triumph for him, but brilliancy and erratic play were ever companions and Pott on Saturday was ineffective.

Like Lo he did some plaudit-earning things. In the beginning it looked like an even-money wager, the play of each suiting the other; but as the game settled down doubt was quickly removed, although the play was closer than the score indicates.

For the most part it was a driving match. Both drove well, Pott a little uncertain with his backhand, a fact that Lo took advantage of.

It was only occasionally that either went to the net. There was not a killing smash in the whole match.

NOT TOO GOOD

In all, it was not a first class exhibition. Most of the points were "suicides" and there were far too many double faults. The balls seemed to trouble Pott and of the two the heat affected him more.

ATTITUDE OF AMERICAN FANS TOWARD FUTURE OF BASEBALL FRANKLY DESCRIBED BY RICE

New York Tribune Sports Writer Tells Of Failure By Officials And Owners To Administrate National Game And Describes Remedies For Inefficiency And Crookedness

By Grantland Rice

Those who have been supporting baseball will continue to support baseball—under just one condition. They must be shown. And they must be shown thoroughly—shown only through a clean sweep at the top and a vital change all along the line.

The crooks, of course, are through forever. If one of them was ever brought back the game would be finished unless the baseball colony at large is the most feeble-minded collection of humans that ever lived.

But casting out the crooks and thieves only will not be enough.

Those handling the destinies of baseball have failed, and have failed utterly. If they have done their best, their best is not enough to protect or save a game that is much closer to the brink than most of the club owners believe it is.

Outside of the proven crooks there have been others who have been willing enough to sign up any shady characters and who in other ways have done nothing but bring discredit on the game. These must go, too, if baseball is to live.

THE OTHER SIDE

Possibly nothing at all will be done except to throw out the crooks and call it a day's work.

If this happens we wouldn't give 20 cents for any franchise in America. For we can't believe under such conditions that newspapers will continue printing professional baseball news and that fans will continue to pay out regular money to support magnates who have no vision beyond the box office.

If nothing is done except to throw out the crooks—if no further move is made to give the game a thorough cleaning and to bring it back upon a new foundation—and both the press and the fans still continue their support, there can be no further complaint, no matter what happens.

Not only the two league presidents but also a big majority of the club owners have shown an unbelievable indifference in protecting the game and building for the future.

They whitewashed Hal Chase and took him back when Christy Mathewson, with three affidavits, testified that he had been throwing games. That move alone was enough to dispossess all parties concerned in the Chase case.

Most of those involved knew well enough last fall that something crooked had developed in the Red Sox world's series. They let it slide until a Chicago grand jury took up the scandal and spread it broadcast. In spite of all this it may be they are going to do nothing but evict the crooks.

If that is the case, then professional baseball is through so far as this generation is concerned.

PERHAPS HE'S RIGHT

A man quite close to the big interests of baseball made this remark today:

"They are not going to do a thing. They are going to try to stall around for a short while, let the matter drop and then gamble on the public's forgetting. They are smart enough to know that the public forget quickly and that it doesn't like to be bothered by any one scandal too long.

"A number of promises will be made, but few of these will ever be carried out. There will be no change at the top. There will be

Strange Discoveries About Our Heart's Electricity

Science Finds That It Generates Three Distinct Currents, Which Record Exactly the Organ's Troubles That Medicine Previously Could Not Diagnose

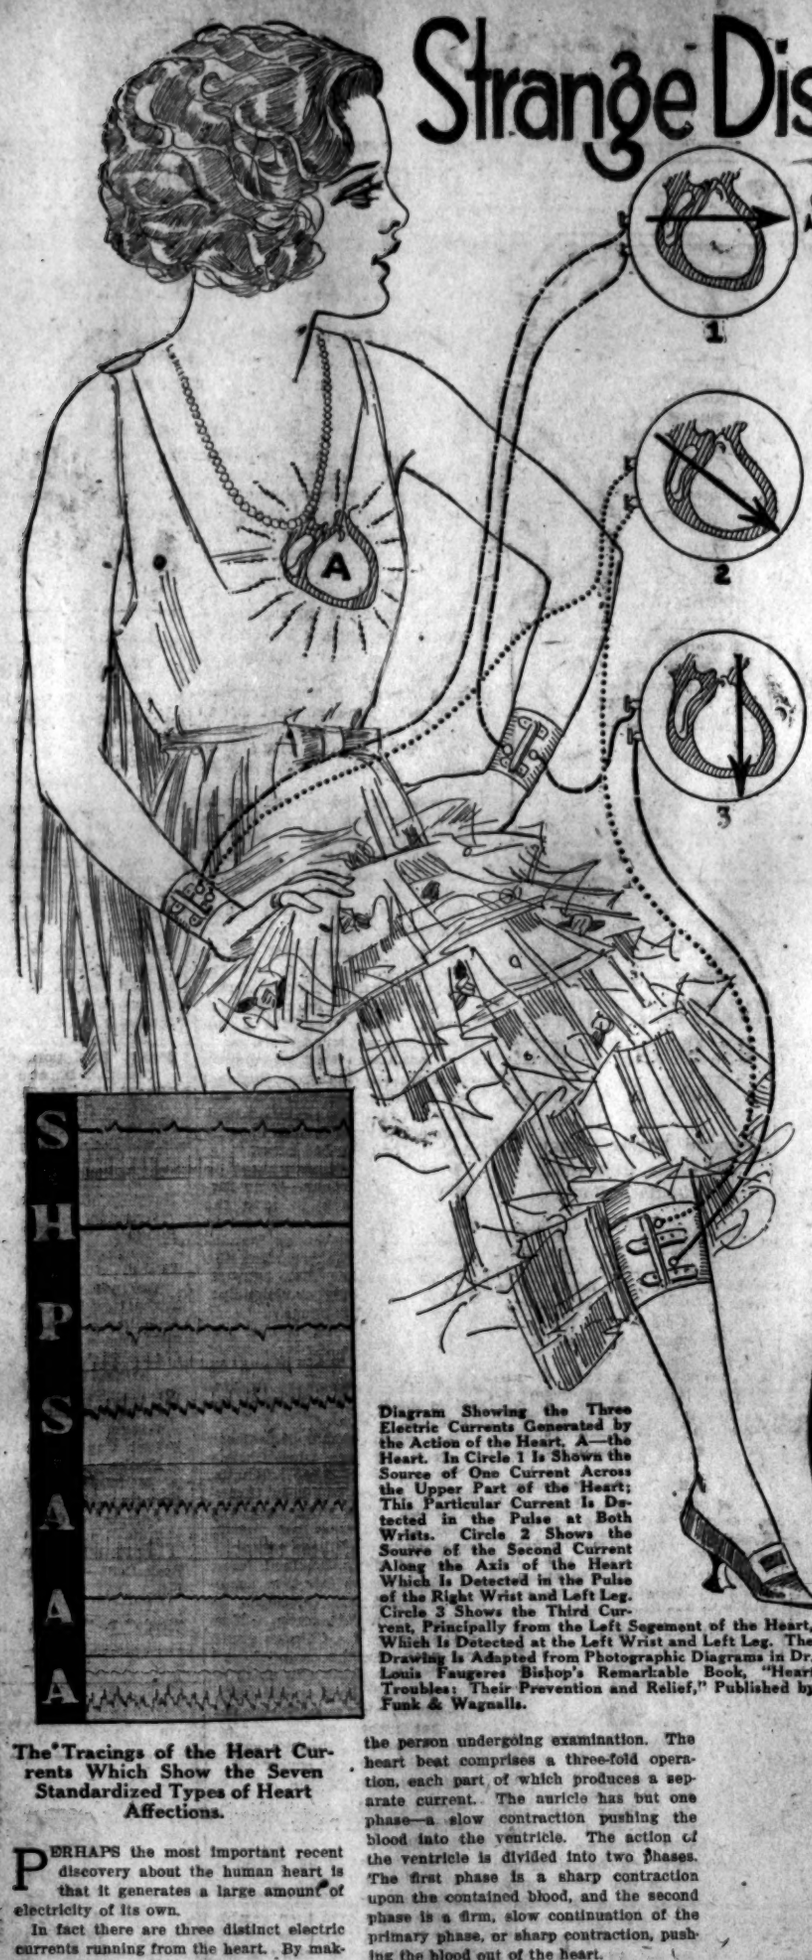

Diagram Showing the Three Electric Currents Generated by the Action of the Heart. A—the Heart. In Circle 1 Is Shown the Source of One Current Across the Upper Part of the Heart; This Particular Current Is Detected in the Pulse at Both Wrists. Circle 2 Shows the Source of the Second Current Along the Axis of the Heart Which Is Detected in the Pulse of the Right Wrist and Left Leg. Circle 3 Shows the Third Current, Principally from the Left Segement of the Heart, Which Is Detected at the Left Wrist and Left Leg. The Drawing Is Adapted from Photographic Diagrams in Dr. Louis Faugeres Bishop's Remarkable Book, "Heart Troubles: Their Prevention and Relief," Published by Funk & Wagnalls.

PERHAPS the most important recent discovery about the human heart is that it generates a large amount of electricity of its own.

In fact there are three distinct electric currents running from the heart. By making a record of these currents, called an "electro-cardiogram," it is possible to know positively whether a heart is healthy or what form of irregularity affects it.

Most people know that the heart is the most essential organ and that it is the most overworked muscle of the body. The greatest cause of death is heart disease. Everybody fears heart trouble sooner or later in his life and becomes worried about its symptoms. Yet with all the anxiety and thought on the subject there is very little definite knowledge as to what constitutes serious heart trouble. For instance, a strong or weak pulse does not, as most people think, prove that you have a strong or weak heart.

The lack of general knowledge concerning heart troubles is not surprising, as doctors until recently had no certainty in reading the heart's action. All this has been changed by the discovery of the heart's electric currents.

Dr. Louis Faugeres Bishop professor of heart and circulatory diseases, in Fordham University, explains in a new book the remarkable services which are performed by the new electric recording instruments in diagnosing heart conditions and showing how they should be treated. Dr. Bishop's book is entitled "Heart Troubles: Their Relief and Prevention" (Funk & Wagnalls).

The three electric currents from the heart are:—a small current caused by the contraction and working of the auricle, which receives the blood; a sharp, quick current caused by the beating of the ventricle, which pumps the blood on; and a third, sluggish wave caused by the contraction of the ventricle.

The electric currents are collected by wires attached to the hands and feet of the person undergoing examination. The heart beat comprises a three-fold operation, each part of which produces a separate current. The auricle has but one phase—a slow contraction pushing the blood into the ventricle. The action of the ventricle is divided into two phases. The first phase is a sharp contraction upon the contained blood, and the second phase is a firm, slow continuation of the primary phase, or sharp contraction, pushing the blood out of the heart.

The first current is called the P current, which represents the contraction of the auricles. The second current is called the R current and represents the contraction of the ventricles. The third current produces the T wave, representative of the work of the ventricles.

The wonderful instrument, called the electro-cardiograph, shows which part of the heart acts first, and which part acts later during all the various combinations that arise as impulses are generated in one part of the heart or another.

If the ventricle acts before the auricle we see in the record the high, sharp current in the form of a church steeple coming before the little, high mound that is characteristic of the current from the auricle.

If the impulse stops at the top of the ventricle and moves to the apex of the heart, we see the current moving in one direction and the church steeple pointing upward. If, on the other hand, the impulse starts at the apex of the ventricle and journeys toward its base, we have the current travelling in the opposite direction and the church steeple pointing downward. These constitute common disorders of the heart and can only be clearly revealed by the electro-cardiograph.

If the heart does not produce sufficient electric force, normally, either it or some other important organ is not right, and this ingenious instrument quickly reveals the presence of trouble.

It is naturally the clearest indicator of the condition of the heart itself. If the physician finds that the curves P and T are very low, he knows at once that the person's heart is weak. If R, instead of rising above the horizontal lines, falls below them, he is sure that the patient is suffering from neurosis of the heart. If T falls below the horizontal lines, then it is a certain indication of arterio-sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries.

There are seven varieties of irregular heart beats that form the basis of functional heart trouble. These are called (1) Sinus arrhythmia, (2) heart block, (3) premature contractions, (4) simple paroxysmal tachycardia, (5) auricular flutter, (6) auricular fibrillation, and (7) alternation of the pulse.

A record by the electro-cardiograph will show immediately which of these irregularities affects a patient's heart.

What makes the heart beat? This is another important matter concerning which science is making new discoveries. The question seems so simple that the answer ought to be found by turning over the pages of any book on physiology, but until recently it has been unanswered. There have been two great classes of those who have tried to solve this question. One set of men believed that the origin of the heart-beat is in the nerves, and later on another set believed that it was in the muscle. It seems now that neither of them was right, but that the cause of the heart beat is really found in the chemistry of the heart.

"The best explanation of modern times," says Dr. Bishop, "is that there is some substance, the nature of which we do not entirely understand, that is constantly being formed in certain parts of the heart, and when this substance accumulates in a certain amount it generates the beat of the heart. When the heart beats this substance is used up, and another beat does not happen until enough of it is formed again. In that way we have a continuously acting cause producing an intermittent action."

Now, there is one spot in the heart where the beat ought to start and spread over the whole organ, but sometimes this chemical activity acts in other places and we have the heart beat generating sometimes in one part of the heart and sometimes in another. Naturally this results in great disorders, and the study of these disorders constitutes an interesting chapter in what we know about the heart.

Nearly all the muscles of the body are balanced against each other, so that one group of muscles pulls against the other and keeps everything steady and in shape. If a muscle becomes paralyzed its opposing muscle draws the limb out of shape. So, when a child has infantile paralysis and some of the muscles are paralyzed, great care is necessary to prevent ever-increasing deformity.

The heart is a muscle, and its size depends upon the tone of the muscle of which it is made up. The tone of the muscle of the heart and of the muscles which surround all the blood vessels is closely associated with the tone of the muscles that we use to move our limbs and bodies. For this reason a great resource in regulating and controlling the condition of the heart and blood vessels in health and disease is found in exercise and those things which affect the voluntary muscles.

Blood pressure is really pressure on the blood by the contraction of the walls of the hollow places in which it is contained—just as if you held something lightly in your hand and then closed your hand firmly upon it, or just as when you squeeze the bulb of a syringe you increase the pressure inside of it. In the same way, low blood pressure exists when there is a corresponding relaxation. Dr. Bishop explains that high and low blood pressure are not necessarily dangerous, and that high pressure in particular is a condition which often arises to correct some other bodily defect—such as weak kidneys—and we should be glad we have it.

The nature of the pulse is another point concerning which many wrong ideas prevail. Persons of experience learn to tell certain things by feeling the pulse—such as whether it is nearly natural, whether it is extremely weak or very strong. While many people believe they can tell a good deal by feeling the pulse, the fact is that the meaning of the pulse is difficult to determine, and even those who have spent their lives in studying it at times are misled. The best of the pulse is simply a wave that comes from the movement of the heart and has nothing to do with the actual flow of the blood.

Another fact that shows that the condition of the pulse must not be taken too seriously in its apparent poorness of quality is that many persons with irregular pulses—pulses that miss beats, take on wrong beats and have beats of all sizes—often show no evidence of poor circulation, while some of the worst cases of failure of circulation that we see are frequently accompanied by a strong and regular pulse.

The most reliable signs of heart trouble are not an irregular pulse, according to Dr. Bishop, but these three things:

1. Shortness of breath.
2. Tenderness over the liver.
3. Swelling of the feet.

After years of study of the heart's action, Dr. Bishop says he has been greatly impressed by its resemblance to the internal combustion engines used in automobiles. He thinks that if people who own automobiles understand this it will lead them to take care of their hearts.

So many people have been compelled to learn about gasoline engines that it is hardly necessary to explain that the internal combustion engine is made to go by the explosion of gasoline in the cylinders, while a steam engine is made to go by passing steam into the cylinders and the steam pushes the piston back and forth. The heart muscle corresponds to the cylinder of the gasoline engine and gets its energy from the combustion of food products.

When a gasoline engine has had a single explosion in the cylinders nothing more can happen until sufficient time has elapsed for more gasoline to be taken in. In the meantime, there being no gasoline present, nothing happens. In the same way a stroke of the heart is followed by a period during which, no matter how much it is stimulated, it will not work. In other words, with each stroke of the heart all its available energy is used up, and more must be produced before it can beat again. The beating of the heart, therefore, consists of a succession of explosions of energy, just as each throb of the automobile engine represents an explosion of gasoline in its cylinders.

To get good results for an engine we need pure gasoline, a proper mixture of air, regular ignition and a constant load. If you throw out your clutch suddenly when your engine is speeding up it races; if you overload it it pounds. The same thing is true with your heart. To get the best results we must have a proper supply of the right kind of food products, neither too much nor too little. We must have also the kinds that burn up and leave no residue.

The impulse generator of the heart lies normally in the auricle and acts much like the commutator of the engine, which should send an average of seventy impulses a minute, and these impulses should spread quickly over the heart, causing it to contract and do its work.

The blood pressure, like the load on the engine, must not be too low, because that makes the heart palpitate, or race, and it must not be too high, because that makes the heart labor or knock.

If you want to find out whether a particular food is good to produce energy in the heart burn it up and see how much heat you can get out of it. If it produces little heat and a bad smell it is not good food to make the heart do its work well, just as heavy crude oil is not good to use in an automobile.

EFFICIENT WORK CHECKS BAD FIRE

Blaze In Congested District Gives Brigade A Tough Tussle

The Fire Brigade encountered one of the most difficult tasks it has had to deal with in some time and checked what threatened to be a very serious fire yesterday afternoon when a blaze broke out in the congested district near Fearon and Yalu Roads.

The fire originated in a cotton ginning establishment at 219 Fearon Road, very near Arnhold Brothers' old silk filature and next door to a large egg factory containing large quantities of empty kerosine tins and packing cases and where a number of the floors were loaded with rice husks. The Hongkew and Central divisions found their work cut out for them when they arrived and it seemed as though the whole block was doomed. Factory hands and the dwellers in the congested district became panicky and obstructed the fire-fighting and the extreme heat and the dense clouds of smoke hampered the work. Added to this handicap was the fact that two portions of the premises were stored ceiling-high with piles of grass rope, necessitating a sparing use of water to prevent the floors from collapsing. Carpenters had to be called in to assist the firemen in shoring up the floors.

Thirty minutes of technical firefighting effected a remarkably efficient checking of the flames and only the premises at No. 219 were burnt out. The upper portions of Nos. 220, 225, 226 and 227 were damaged and in only one place did the fire get to the front wall of the egg factory.

The outbreak was caused by sparks from a ginning machine setting fire to one of the workers' clothes. He ran and burning bits of cloth ignited a pile of cotton. The worker was slightly burned.

The alleyways round about were packed with cases and baskets of eggs, which came off remarkably well, few being smashed.

"One or two came in handy as fire extinguishers," Chief Officer Pett remarks in his report. "With rather marked effect."

the captaincy of a professional football team is rather a casual affair.

"I may be wrong, I simply ask for information. Does the captain have a study-class for his men? Is the science of the game gone into and examined collectively? Are questions and ideas invited?

"Does such a class, if there be one, consider how individual skill may be incorporated and blended into the strategic methods of the eleven? Are strategic methods considered at all in the light of last week's game and in anticipation of the opponents' tactics of next week's?

REPETITION OF ERRORS

"You have already remarked how the errors in the general attack in the first half of this match we are now watching are being repeated in the second half. Why should that be? Surely a captain should discuss with his men during the interval the possibility of revised tactics? "I say this, of course, in ignorance of what goes on in the dressing-room. The men may be too tired physically, and in need of such rest as they may snatch.

"At college we used to discuss theories and principles of play. Those talks meant everything in shaping our common play. You may say that we considered the mathematics of the game. We made a study as well as a practice of it. We had our G. H. Q. of football.

"Training is one thing; study another. Training aims at making the individual fit and skilled in the finesse of the game. Study aims at marshalling the whole of the team's strength against the weakness of the opponents. And in the marshalling you have the genius of a captain."

MORE BRAIN WORK

I agreed with my fellow-spectator. Professional football seems at present to put all its emphasis upon footwork and to forget the exercise of the brain. And other things being equal, it is the brain that wins. Each club should have its study-class, its G. H. Q., its strategic stag.

But perhaps I am merely carrying coals to Newcastle.

IN THE RECORDS

"Will the names of Cicotte, Jackson, Williams and the other crooks be left in the records?" writes a fan. "Why not leave them in for all time, written in letters of red?"

This would sound reasonable enough if it were not for the matter of printing two colors.

Their names will remain in the records, all right, just as the names of Devlin, Hall and Craven have survived.

We notice, by the way, when Jackson and Williams arrived in Greenville, S. C., it is reported that they received a welcome from their friends. This is a slander that Greenville should refute. There are a lot of fine people in Greenville, whereas any one who would extend a welcome to crooked ball players or crooked gamblers would indorse burglary and child murder.

TEETHING WITHOUT TEARS

A NEW LIGHT ON BABY-RAISING

It is a recognised fact that Babies—and in fact all Children—need medicines of their own, and that most baby-medicines do more harm in the long run than good. Also great mistakes are often made in measuring doses for tiny patients. Baby's Own Tablets, the Canadian medicine for Children of all ages, meet every difficulty. They are guaranteed to be absolutely harmless and free from opiates. They are so soft that they fall into powder at very slight pressure, forming an ideal dose for infants.

Baby's Own Tablets are pleasant to the taste; slightly laxative, comforting and digestive—a specific for feverishness, constipation, diarrhoea and worms. At the time of teething they act like magic, giving painless sleep and easy teething.

Obtainable from chemists, also at 60 cents the vial, post free, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

Raw Silk Market Is Restricted In America

(Reuter's Service)

New York, October 21 (by mail).—Raw silk buying is still very much restricted. The mills are taking odd lots just as they require them, and in the absence of any quickening in the finished goods business, their requirements are very small.

Publication during the past week of mail reports giving the details of many of the plans for stabilising the raw silk markets in Japan, has led to a broader discussion of the possibilities lying in the pegged market. Some manufacturers think that any substantial buying will be deferred for a long time unless all restrictions are removed at the producing end, while many others welcome the move as furnishing the only practical method of meeting a situation unlike any that has gone before in raw silk merchandising.

YOKOHAMA STOCKS

The very large stocks at Yokohama, consisting of 45,000 bales according to reports reaching here, coupled with smaller receipts by about 35,000 bales than those of a year ago, and also joined with the knowledge that the warehoused silks here have not decreased much in volume during the past several weeks make a combination of adverse factors for sellers which would certainly drop prices much lower if something like stabilisation had not been attempted.

Manufacturers who have cut the prices of goods to levels that admit of no immediate profit and made have no sales to speak of, are of the opinion that still lower prices on raw silk could not stimulate silk goods distribution under present depressed business conditions in the textile trades, hence they argue that the steadier Yokohama prices are maintained, the sooner a sound basis of merchandising will be reached.

What raw silk has been undergoing in the way of violent decline and lack of consumption, is manifest now in wool, cotton, and flax, and other textile raw materials, so that many of the leading manufacturers using silk contend that even an abortive attempt at stabilisation will prove helpful in the end.

Honan Needs $2,000,000 To Meet Famine Demands

a few days before. Wei Shi Hsien is located only 30 miles south of Kaifeng.

In Wei Chuan Hsien a band of people have got together and practiced the chanting of incantations and charms which they declare will ward off the robbers bullets but nine of them were killed recently by the brigands and they said that some of them had spoken and not kept silence and so the charm was broken and the bullets penetrated instead of glancing harmlessly away!

SUICIDE OF MAGISTRATE

In Sin Cheng Hsien the magistrate committed suicide the other day because he could raise no funds to meet his needs. The matter of funds is getting to be acute. The teachers in all the government schools struck recently because they had received no pay and only went back to their classes after they had received a fraction of what was due. Many soldiers are unpaid and if they are not paid sooner or later they will join the ranks of the brigands. In one county in the mountains hundreds of villages have been reported to be burned. These things do not create a great stir in the outside world.

A Chinese evangelist reported that in Wei Shi Hsien alone over 100 robbers were executed last year and yet the number of robberies continually increased. The price of food is double the normal rate practically all over the province.

This seems to present a doleful picture of conditions but it is a true portrayal and the situation is likely to get more acute rather than improve at least until next harvest. Besides it is likely that disease will follow in the tracks of famine.

NEED $2,000,000

Up until the present time our committee has received in grants, gifts, etc. in round numbers the sum of about $250,000. This we have allotted to stricken areas, the distribution to be carefully supervised. But consider how little this is when one of the worst stricken counties north of the Yellow River estimate the sum necessary to save the lives in this single county at $2,000,000.

The need is appalling and the danger to stable government and order is tremendous. Now would seem to be the time for the consortium to come to the help of the government, if ever. With all I have read of the uncertain conditions and the reports that we had received from all over the province—yet I had not had a full realisation of the danger to the country that lurks in the present situation. It is possibly graver than most realise. If the government continues without funds, the price of foodstuffs continues to rise and famine and disease stalk across the land hand in hand, then the worst may happen. And the Bolsheviks are moving into Eastern Siberia as fast as they can move the men, so your paper of the last few days informs us.

In the name of Christianity, in the name of humanity, in the name of statesmanship, in the name of business and common sense, we ought to make our contributions to the famine funds large and great sums should be loaned from some source to help the Chinese government meet the situation.

Official Censured In Anhwei Province

(China Press Correspondence)

Hofeihsien, Anhwei, November 17.—All the schools of the city, including both government schools and mission schools, have united in an effort to raise money for the Famine Relief Committee. A mass meeting of all the schools of the city was held in the Central Christian Church. This was followed the next day by a street parade. The girls schools took part in the parade, marching separately.

The Christian Girls school has raised more than $200 by an entertainment. The Christian boys school is presenting an amatuer theatrical for which they have already sold more than $300 worth of tickets. The government Normal and Middle schools are combining in presenting a theatrical. These schools have already raised several hundred dollars.

OFFICIAL CENSURED

The movement was started at a meeting of representative men of the city, with the district magistrate present. He offered to prepare subscription books and help in the raising of money. When the books appeared, it was discovered that the magistrate was taking advantage of the popular movement to raise money and send it through official government channels instead of through the Famine Relief Committees as planned.

The heads of the schools refused to use the books prepared and it is understood that the Commercial Guild is doing the same. They all agreed that they could raise very little money if it was to enter the official coffers. With independent subscriptions to be sent through the Chinese-Foreign Famine Relief Committee there is hope that a large amount will be raised.

WOMAN'S CLUB

The literary department of the American Woman's Club will meet at the Royal Asiatic Society's hall this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Mrs. H. K. Wright will read a paper on Chinese porcelains, specialising on Blanc de Chine, and Mrs. W. S. Ward will address the meeting on "one color" porcelains. Exhibits of varieties of the specimens will be shown to illustrate the talks.

Tale Of Diminishing Trade

Each week the tale of diminishing trade activity is lengthened, says the London Times. Demand for cotton goods has decreased so appreciably during the past few months that the Lancashire cotton industry last week held a conference to discuss a resort to short-time working, in order to keep as many factories going as possible.

The falling-off in the foreign demand for cotton goods is largely due to the fall in the price of silver, which has greatly reduced the purchasing power of the Far Eastern markets, while home demand has decreased owing to a slower rate of absorption. Short-time working has been in operation in the boot and shoe, linen, and hosiery trades for some time, and, in the woollen industry, manufacturers have not booked any substantial fresh orders for some months past.

The motor industry which, a year ago, was enjoying an extraordinary degree of prosperity, is now in the depths of depression, and the prospect is one of almost unrelieved gloom. Foreign competition is beginning to assert itself in the iron and steel trade, which hitherto has had a rosy prospect before it. Many other instances of diminishing trade activity have lately been reported in our columns. But the reaction in trade has so quickly succeeded a period of buoyant activity that many people seem to have been surprised by it. These people obviously failed to perceive the hectic flush on the cheek of industry last autumn. Its very activity, perhaps, tended to obscure its fevered condition. A year ago home and foreign buyers competed recklessly for goods, and paid whatever price were asked.

The plain put unpalatable truth of the situation is that prices of commodities have reached a level which the existing volume of credit, or buying power, is unable to maintain. Prices must fall. The credit position is fully extended.

Labor, too, will have to reckon with the march of economic prices, which no theories will serve to dam back. Real wages will be determined not by such phrases as the cost of living or standard of living, but by actual production. In short, Labor will have to recognise that it will be able to obtain only what it produces and no more. The same principle applies to capital. High costs of production act as a buffer to falling prices, and give a bonus to foreign competitors in the scramble for orders.

Fear Of Trade Collapse

A deepening fear pervades both financial and trade circles that we are rapidly approaching a general economic collapse.

The United States, which had come nearly abreast of us as an exporting country before the war, has now gone far ahead, the relative position being: France, 4; United Kingdom, 10; United States, 15.

"We are making a better recovery than France or Germany; but then we are very much more dependent on overseas commerce than they are. We buy much more foreign food and raw materials than we sell manufactured goods; and the foreign investments whose yield helped to balance the account are greatly reduced. It may be summarised in its three main divisions, thus:

Eight Months of	Food, Drink, Tobacco.	Raw Materials.	Manufactures.
Imports (£ millions).
1913	189	171	133
1919	468	362	183
1920	512	527	307
Exports (£ millions).
1913	20	42	278
1919	18	64	385
1920	33	104	740

"We have received little or no more foreign and Colonial food than before the war, but are paying Argentina, the United States, and the Dominions three or four times as much for their grain, flour and meat.

"Take the most important of raw materials—cotton. We received in quantity this year only half as much more than before the war, but the value has risen from 23 million pounds to 186 millions.

"In large part this is a punishment for slackness in developing Imperial and other new supplies; for Egypt, which has come on very rapidly, is still the only considerable source after the United States.

"Can the home of the Industrial Revolution and the Manchester philosophy go on living on bloated prices? In 1913, 139 million lbs. of cotton yarns were priced at £9,857,000; this year we sold only 106 million lbs. for £33,470,000. We have exported a little more cotton thread—at four times the price."—London Daily Chronicle.

Hankow Market

Hankow, November 17, 1920.

FINANCE AND MONEY MARKET

There was again very little business doing and no bills came out when rates fell. There was a small demand for remittance. Taels T.T. on Shanghai.—Chinese market rose to 97.3 and fell again on the 17th inst. to 97.1875. Foreign Banks quoted 97¼. Dollars remained steady at 69.975-70.175. Interest 8½ per-cent.

IMPORTS

There was little doing in spot cargo at low prices, and despite Manchester cheaper prices dealers were not interested in forward business. A little business was done in Shanghai mill cloths, but there was no improvement in local prices. Clearances showed a slight improvement.

EXPORTS

The drop in Silver and Rates towards the end of the week is about the only thing of interest to report. Tael prices continue weak and business should now pick up.

Five Dentifrice Features in One

(Newest ideas of all dentifrices combined in Calox

WHITENS TEETH
Forms active peroxide of hydrogen in the mouth
PREVENTS ACID MOUTH
Creates genuine lime-water in the mouth
DESTROYS DECAY-GERMS
Releases pure, refreshing OXYGEN gas
REMOVES TARTAR FILM
Peroxide and lime-water combine to dissolve and wash away tartar
TASTES GOOD
No strong druggy flavor

SOME of us brush our teeth to whiten them; others to prevent decay and still others to refresh the mouth. Many believe they have acid-mouth or wish to remove the "crust of tartar" which is forming.

Regardless of why you brush your teeth, study the chart above and decide whether the dentifrice you are now trying will do or is doing all that you can reasonably expect from a dentifrice.

If it is, continue to use it faithfully. If it is good for only one of the duties of a good dentifrice, you had better try McK & R Calox, which combines in one dentifrice most of the features of all modern dentifrices.

If you haven't heard the story of McK & R Calox—how it forms real lime-water in your mouth to prevent acids—how it creates fresh active peroxide on the teeth every time you brush them—how it releases genuine oxygen gas which penetrates into every crevice and "gasses" the dangerous decay-germs into harmlessness, if you don't know this story of the victory of modern science, send for "The McK & R Calox Story."

Your dentist will recommend McK & R Calox to you and your druggist has it. Try it next time you need a dentifrice.

The taste is a surprise to most people. It is not the least bit "druggy" which proves that it is possible to make a pleasant tasting dentifrice and that a "strong" taste does not prove the efficiency of any paste or powder.

Four Young Ladies Complain

WE have received the following important letter. The names signed to it are those of four young Chinese ladies of good family:

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—Several of us Chinese young women read with pleasure the letter of Jek Yll-jen to your excellent paper. It is all too true and we young Chinese women are in fear of sailors. For instance, one afternoon an intelligent-looking Chinese girl whose face and bearing showed she was a Christian student, was seized and kissed violently by foreign sailors. We were just back of her and hurried into a rice shop for self-preservation. Some by-standers thought it a joke. And we could cite other instances.

But Jek Yll-jen does not mention the fundamental reason for these insults. In every case that we know of when Chinese young ladies are insulted by foreign sailors, the sailors are drunk; and this of course adds to the danger. The drunken sailors don't know what they are doing. When they are crazy drunk they can not make any distinction between good women and prostitutes.

But why not put the blame where it belongs? First on the Municipal and Chinese authorities that permit men to open these horrible dens, and then permit ignorant ricsha coolies to show the sailors where they are.

Second, the blame must be put on the devilish men who sell the poison to these sailors and the third, the ease with which prostitutes infest our streets so that a drunken sailor mistakes a good woman for a temptress and tries to treat her as such. Against this the virtuous women of Shanghai protest.

We notice on the next page of your paper some notes showing that American people don't want the saloon back. We of the New China look to America for her help now. We trust in you. We believe you. Will not your paper now take up the cause of Chinese womanhood in Shanghai, and use your influence to the end that the saloons be closed? Brothels would soon follow and we young women can then walk the streets in peace.

Yours sincerely,
Four Women of New China.

In the letter referred to by the writers of the foregoing, Jek Yll-jen, after describing the insults offered two Chinese ladies by drunken sailors issuing from the Mascot Bar on North Szechuen Road, said:

"So in order to maintain the good feeling between the Chinese and Foreign settlers and the public welfare here I beg you, dear sir, to make a special effort to draw the attention of those who are responsible for upholding righteousness and keeping good order in the settlement, to this situation."

The problem here set is one for the local police, the Municipal Council, the Consular Body and the officers in command of ships anchoring in this harbor. It is an evil that must and will be suppressed. If Chinese ladies cannot go about the streets of Shanghai unmolested by drunken sailors we have come to a fine pass. Action would be prompt enough if a foreign lady were to be accosted, roughly handled and subjected to like insults.

These sailors must be made to know that the foreign residents of this port do not commit these offenses against decency and morality and friendly understanding as between races, and that if they are to continue to be the guests of this city they must conduct themselves as guests. And these remarks are not due to one or two complaints, but to dozens of them. Everybody knows the scandal of it.

Control of this evil is up to the authorities named and the community will hold them responsible for failure to control it. It seems to us, for one thing, that a form could be drawn up by the police acquainting newcomers with the police regulations of this port and that this form should be submitted to the commander of every ship entering before he is permitted to grant shore leave, and that those going ashore should be compelled to read these regulations before they become guests of this port. Better supervision of the resorts involved also is called for as well as severe punishment for offenders.

We wish to say in closing that our remarks are not intended to apply merely to sailors from the various warships, a large majority of whom are well behaved when ashore. They are intended to apply to all visitors.

Rent Profiteering And Moral Paralysis

BY REV. JOHN R. STRATON
(Pastor Calvary Baptist Church, New York City)

The agony of October 1—moving day—passed by with less of tragedy than we had feared. The new laws fortunately have given a little breathing spell to the people, and they have saved the masses from much injustice and some real suffering.

But let us not delude ourselves with false hopes. This is only temporary relief. Already the living conditions in New York are so congested that there has been untold suffering, especially within the ranks of the poor and the weak, and the end is not yet.

When we allow the materialistic, mammon worshipping forces of our modern life to herd the people together and to pile them on top of each other, as is now the case, we must pay the penalty for such folly and wrong.

We have seen the evolution of living conditions go forward step by step from oldfashioned ease and comfort to an ever-increasing degree of congestion and discomfort. The housing of the people is one of the most vital of all of their concerns, and, therefore, these are matters of the first importance.

Already we are beginning to reap the evil harvest from false and vicious sowing. For one thing, our health authorities are warning us that there is a real danger to the physical well-being of the people. And it does not take the skill of a doctor to appreciate the force of this fact.

You cannot double up whole families in a single house, and then pile another family or two in upon them, making the congestion far worse, without a violation of the laws of sanitation which cannot fail to result in the most deadly consequences to the health of the people.

And all of these conditions weigh even more heavily when it comes to the matter of morals.

No sane man, who really sees the facts as they are today, can fail to have the most profound apprehension for the future.

The living conditions which have been brought about by the stress of economic forces and the plundering of profiteers, react most immediately and profoundly in the field of morals.

These things have brought almost the entire collapse of the home life of the people, and the end is not yet.

When living conditions become so cramped and pitiably poor that young people have nowhere to meet in their own homes, then they will meet in the parks or the dance halls, or worse resorts of the city, and the results cannot fail in a breaking down of the guards of safety and the impairment of moral ideals.

In many instances the congestion within homes and apartments is now so acute that modesty, moral restraint, and even elemental decency are almost impossible.

We must turn away from the altar of mammon and come back to the true God, or pay the price of our folly and sin. A pastor sees these conditions from the heart side, and tragic illustrations of the foregoing truths could be given by any priest or pastor who really shepherds his flock.

There is a direct and real connection between rent profiteering and the moral paralysis which is now menacing our society from all sides!

THE PUGILIST WHO WAS STUNG

"Not so long ago Sam Langford was brought out of his retirement and matched against a husky negro. The manager saw Langford before the fight and said, 'Look here, you know you can knock him out if you like, but give him a show. Let it go the full six rounds.' 'All right,' said the ever-obliging Sam. The bout started, and in the second round Langford's adversary slung in a terrific blow which floored him. Sam got up slowly and just then the bell clanged. The bell sounded for the third round and Langford crossed over to his opponent with his hand extended in friendly fashion. His opponent looked puzzled. 'Say,' said he, 'this ain't the last round, Sam.' 'Oh, yes,' replied Langford, 'guess it is; certain it is. It's the very last round, believe me.' And it was."

Lady Duff-Gordon at a luncheon party, defended the ultra-short skirt of 1920. "A short skirt," she said, "is so convenient, so hygienic. Ugh! when I think of the trailing skirts of the past it makes me shudder." A frowning and austere matron retorted: "That sort of talk is nonsensical. These 1920 ultra-short skirts are of no use whatever: I defy you to name a single use they have." "Well," said Lady Duff-Gordon, with a smile, "they are certainly useful for getting up stares."

Japan Loses More Than China From Hsu Shu-Cheng's Escape

(Chinese Press Opinion)
(Peking Leader)

The flight of General Hsu Shu-cheng, the infamous leader of the Anfu Clique, has resulted in great alarm throughout the Metropolitan Capital. The Chinese Police Authorities who have been during the past few months guarding the various exits of the Legation Quarters cannot be freed from blame. Other critics beg to complain of the inactivity displayed by the Chinese Government in not pressing the extradition of the Anfuites from the Japanese Minister. It should be remembered that since last July when the Presidential Mandate ordering the general arrest and apprehension of the Anfu ringleaders was promulgated, several long months have come to pass. Not only did the responsible judicial authorities who were commissioned to draw up all the connected relevant evidences testifying to the offenses and crimes as well as high treason committed by the Anfuites fail to submit a proper document with which the Chinese Government might with advantage communicate to the Japanese Minister with a demand for the extradition of the Anfuites, but the fact that the Ministry of Foreign Affairs only protested with the Japanese Minister on a single occasion against the sheltering of the dangerous political criminals convinced the public that no great attention has been paid by the Central Authorities to the apprehension of these treacherous offenders.

On the other hand, the Central Government has all the time been engaged in other issues of secondary importance such as the so-called proclamation of the false national reunion, the issuance of national and domestic bonds, the appointment of members of parliaments and the selection of special delegates and representatives. Now this laissez faire attitude adopted by the Chinese Government has given the Japanese Government ample reasons to imagine that the Anfu ringleaders are after all not really urgently required by the Chinese Government.

As soon as General Hsu Shu-cheng has made good his escape, sensational rumors again begin to spread everywhere. The High Authorities again express their most regretful feelings on the incident, which they asserted may lead to disastrous consequences owing to the anticipated subtle activities on the part of the escaped criminal. Indeed, the whole game has been a mere child play. Opinions regarding the damage to the Government, in consequence of General Hsu's departure from the Japanese Legation are many. But the truth is that Japan, not China, will ultimately be the real loser. In support of this contention, the following points have been offered.

A national morality is similar to a personal morality. If a person acts adversely to morality, everybody will despise him. In the same manner, a nation will only invite despicable scorn and just resentment from its brother nations if it does not act in accordance with its good morals. The serious consequences following a loss of morality are even far worse than those that succeed a material loss.

In this connection, the public is reminded of the fact that when the Anfuites took refuge in the Japanese Legation, the Chinese Foreign Office was emphatically informed by the Japanese Minister to the effect that steps had been taken to prevent the refugees from communicating with outsiders. The Japanese Minister who was on this as on other occasions representing the Japanese Government did formally announce that he had not permitted and would continue not to permit any communication of a political nature or otherwise to reach the Anfuites whom he gave shelter. Now that means have been successfully devised to let the dangerous Anfu leaders escape from his Legation, the Japanese Minister still has the audacity to formally invite the attention of the Chinese Government to that effect. It is only fair to state that the previous statements of the Japanese Minister were worthless notwithstanding the fact that at the time he made such announcements, it was distinctly stated by the Japanese Minister that they were presented upon his word of honor.

Should the present state of affairs be tolerated to exist, China will sink into a fathomless oblivion far worse than the Valley of Death, even in the absence of subtle activities engineered by the Anfu General to the great detriment of the country. Thus, it is not the escape of General Hsu Shu-cheng that should put China on her guard, but the idea of offsetting any foreign and domestic menace.

JAPAN LOSES CONFIDENCE

Japan will henceforth stand to lose all confidence which other powers may have hitherto or in the future placed in her. Why? Because Japan is capable of acting in contrast with what she may profess. In this case, Japan's heavy losses resulting from an isolation will be inestimable. China, on the other hand, will not stand to lose so much, but will add one more experience to her cup of bitterness.

Now patriots of China, stand up and exert yourselves for the sake of your national integrity. Those who are well versed in foreign languages should now attempt to write out a real portrait of the past events in connection with the giving of asylum to Anfuites and the letting of such refugees to take leave of his Legation by the Japanese Minister. When such notifications will reach the eyes of all foreign friends, the world will be bound to give a just and an impartial judgment of the attitude and behavior of Japan in her dealings with her next door neighbor China. This step will be much more beneficial to China than mere statements of abuses condemning Japan for the tolerance of and connivance in such an unhappy even as the flight of the most infamous political criminal that the Chinese history has ever recorded.

The Riddle Of England's Future

England After The War. By Frank Dilnot. Doubleday, Page & Co. $3.

That Englishmen have grown thin was the impression made upon Frank Dilnot when he got off his ship after two and a half years' absence in America, and confirmed when he got to his club. The effect of war rationing, of course. The thinness hasn't affected their souls, which to him seem as dauntless as ever. And they have to be dauntless, because the war has left England the leader of Europe, with the Continent largely dependent on her and America, and she must not only settle her own problems but deal wisely with those of other countries.

Settling her own problems is a large order, which he calls "reconstruction." The trivial and the important are so mixed together in his "England After the War" that it is not at all times possible to take him seriously, but when he is serious he is very serious indeed. He sees such a new England that anything may come out of its melting pot, even revolution. At present she is "a country in transition."

The departure of the silk hat strikes him as a disagreeable portent, the more so as hatters give him as one of the reasons the fact that the workmen find it distasteful and unpleasant work as compared with the making of other hats. Another reason is that customers want something more rough and ready. In other words, "keeping up appearances" is not the mighty necessity it once was in England, and workmen are refusing to do unpleasant and unhealthful work—two signs of a changed England. Along with them goes the virtual disappearance of the first class railway carriage. During the rush hours in London the traveling inspectors do not examine the tickets. It makes no difference, since a man goes into any car he likes, and the third-class carriage is nearly as good as the first.

In short, "there is a general unsettlement throughout the land," and "the coming life of England is a riddle." The convulsions in other countries affect her. If France starves England will go hungry, if Italy is bankrupt England will lose heavily, if Germany cannot manufacture goods a valuable part of England's markets vanishes. From America England must draw much sustenance both for her own needs and those of the other European countries, all weaker than herself. Is America going to fail England in her need? Mr. Dilnot can see "no certain signs" that America will not fail her.

The ranks of the trade unions have been enormously swelled and they are not in a pleasant mood. They have made repeated demands for higher wages, all of which have been granted. They are in no mood to see the cost of living rise. Mr. Dilnot writes here a little as if the labor class was the only one which felt the high cost of living, and as if he did not know that each rise in the wages of labor increased the cost of living to everybody and made necessary another strike by labor. He sees a great increase in the labor ranks in the next House of Commons. Beyond that he does not venture, but he asks questions: "Is it likely that a republic will be established? Can a revolution be effected by means of the present machinery at the disposal of the British people?" He looks for the answer before long.

The housing problem, he finds, produces great discontent. The population is growing and needs new houses, and before the war about 100,000 were put up annually. The war stopped all building, and there is now a demand for at least 800,000 new houses. The Government has made efforts to help along building, but they have been unsuccessful. "And the inevitable result is that the increasing population continues to stack itself into buildings which do not expand." But this is only one of the things that have changed the mood of the Englishman. He is anxious, and he feels unsafe. "And so it occurs that he goes to a farce or a musical comedy twice as often as he did in the old days, when he found a subtler joy touched with contentment and security and an assured outlook."

As for women, there were more of them than men even before the war, and now there are a million more. With nearly a million of the best type of young men wiped out, "the husbands for years to come will more frequently be of the older type, possessing less of the vital qualities of young and courageous manhood." Possibly the situation may lead to easier divorce, but that, he thinks, will not help much.

England has now got to raise £750,000,000 a year for the national services, instead of £200,000,000, as before. Her commercial framework is shattered and she has to begin at the beginning. It is true that when the war ended a cry for goods arose from all over Europe, but Europe was now impoverished and England had to take credit instead of cash.

The growth of labor's strength is not due merely, as Americans have a tendency to think, to the change in sentiment in favor of labor. It is due to the extension of the franchise, by which great numbers of silent radicals were released and made vocal. Because women are more interesting than men, the fact that this bill gave the vote to women absorbed attention in America. There was so much said here about votes for women having been obtained at last that comparatively few Americans noted the great increase in the voting power of men made by the same bill.

Of course there was also a change in sentiment and the by-elections portend a great increase in the Labor Party's strength at the next election. Mr. Dilnot does not say that he expects a Labor majority, but his frequent references to what a Labor Ministry might or might not do betray him. He forecasts the miners' strike, and virtually predicts that if they strike and the Government "madly" meets them with force, blood will be flowing within twenty-four hours. At least he says that would have happened if the Government had resisted the railway strike, and puts the miners' case on all fours with that of the railwaymen. If the Government had acknowledged defeat, the only other course—a general election—would have followed, but parliamentary government would have been temporarily overthrown, though in such a case it would have come back in some form or other as the outcome of revolution.

Ireland, too, is on the verge of revolution. Outsiders ask, "What is England going to do?" If they lived within the kingdom they would put it in a different form, "What is Ireland going to do?" England has improved Ireland's condition until it is now one of the best governed countries in Europe, but "Ireland cites ancient wrongs, freely admitted on all hands," and, ruled by Sinn Fein, insists on breaking away. England offered to let the Irish settle the question in any way they liked, short of complete independence, and called a convention to decide the matter, but it broke up in disagreement. At the next general election Sinn Fein, which stands for absolute independence, swept Ireland. "In a word, they do not want the Union Jack," and the people of England, Scotland and Wales are determined, from motives of self-protection against foreign powers, that the Union Jack shall not be removed from Ireland. "The safety of England is at stake, and there must be no possible foothold for a foreign foe at our very gates." He has no solution; he only states the facts as he sees them.

It is to be hoped that his frank talk about England and America will reach many English ears. The English, he says, regard America as unforeign, while Americans consider England just as foreign as any other country. The identity of language and origin contributes to the English delusion, but is wholly disregarded by the United States. The English did not feel any real resentment over the frequent twisting of the lion's tail, and did not make fun of Americans any more than of Englishmen, Scots or Australians. In America he had to combat a delusion that England was the "severe, harsh, rasping and suspicious critic of America," and his amazed denials were taken as merely the effort of a guest to make himself agreeable. The war, however, created a reaction favorable to England, for "Americans are judges of quality in men." They did not go into the war because of sympathy with the Allies, but because "Germany, with surprising effrontery, ordered the flag of America off the high seas. Any

RUNYON
Learns Of Hats And Heads

BY DAMON RUNYON

I have made much observation of men's hats in my travels about country, and I note that every city has its own peculiar styles of masculine headgear.

Here in Cleveland they go in for very soft hats, creased in the center and with limber brims. It is also quite a city for caps, judging from the number I see in the streets.

The greatest cap wearing community I ever saw is Colorado Springs, Colorado. This is partly due to the number of tourists who go there, a tourist being strangely addicted to caps, but there is also another reason.

The wind blows with some violence through Colorado Springs at times, and a cap is handy because it will generally stick to the head. However, the wind blows loosely, and quite profusely at some seasons of the year out in San Francisco, and caps are not unusually numerous in that city.

New York is the great cap center of the United States. In fact, a cap has come to be regarded as a characteristic of a New York type, the East Side tough. Of course an East Side tough is no tougher, if as tough, as a West Side tough, but from time immemorial the East Side tough has been regarded as tough, with a capital "T."

I always had an idea that the Paris Apache invariably wore a cap, too, basing this impression on the presentation of the Apache dances I used to see around the cabarets and in vaudeville.

I happened to be wearing a cap around Paris one time and I noted that many curious glances were directed at me. I sought an explanation and my friend, Hank Wales, the newspaper correspondent, told me that the folks thought I was a detective.

It seems, according to Hank, that the Harris movies have made the cap a distinctive mark of the sleuth hound of justice.

The nearest approach to standardisation in the headgear that we have in this country comes in the Summer when nearly all men go in for straws.

Last Summer a New York hat firm got out an edition of straws with extremely narrow brims, so narrow that they looked as if they had been chewed off, and Broadwayites fairly rioted to buy these hats. New York is the great derby hat town of the world. A New Yorker gets under his derby sooner than any other man in America. He is just naturally fond of his iron boiler. He wears soft hats of curious formations in the early Fall, picking out the most bizarre formations, but he is never happy until he gets beneath his derby.

Philadelphia and Boston wait until overcoat time before putting on derbies. The New Yorker is apt to appear newly derbied as soon as he discards his straw hat or when it is broken up for him.

A well nigh extinct type of derby hat is the pearlgray affair with the black band. George Grant, the president of the Boston Braves, and Bob Hilliard, the actor, are the last men I saw wearing these hats, although Jack Johnson, the prize fighter, was very partial to them.

Some men tell me the brown derby is also passing out since the expression "That wins the Brown Derby" came into use as meaning the capture of the booby prize. I thought this expression came from the world of sport, but it seems that it really originated among hat men themselves and that it is an old saying in the bonnet business.

Some men can make any hat they put on look distinctive, even a derby. It is quite a trick to make a derby look that way. Paul Armstrong the playwright now dead, could take a soft hat and with a few twists of the wrist and rim give it a singularly picturesque appearance.

Coming out on the train the other night, I ran into a garrulous man who told me much about hats, and something about heads. His name is Frank Mackin, and they call him The Mad Hatter of Philadelphia. Civic pride fairly oozed from Mr. Mackin. The first thing he told me was that Philadelphia men have larger heads than the men of any other city in this country.

The statement may be true, but a phrenologist once informed me that the best shaped heads in America are found among the men along the West Coast, and that Boston heads have more in them than any others. I think he was a Boston phrenologist.

Elopements 4,000 B. C.

The sixth and seventh clauses in the Sumerian law found at Yale some four years ago, and again in the public eye because of the find at the University of Pennsylvania Museum of a code similar to the Sumerian and the Code of Hammurabi, deal with elopement in 4,000 B. C. For many years the Code of Hammurabi was thought to be the oldest legal lore in existence, although scholars were all agreed that it was undoubtedly revised from a much older document. Dr. Albert T. Clay claimed a greater antiquity for the Sumerian law found in the Babylonian section at Yale, although not declaring that his proofs were incontrovertible; and Pennsylvania now believes that its latest find is the oldest of all. Undoubtedly one antedated the other by a little and overlapped by a gerat deal. Each code has derived something from the other.

The light on elopement shed by the Sumerian law is arresting. It was a brave lad who would elope with a Sumerian girl!

In those days the father's and mother's place in the home was fixed and definite and powerful. Marriages were arranged somewhat after the present fashion in France. It was the parents who decided the marriage price or dowry. Laws then in force regulated the future disposal of that dowry in case of death or divorce.

Eloping was more difficult of accomplishment then than now, and more culpable. The hardy lover had one loophole: he might evade the legal death penalty for a guilty male eloper by omitting to obey the law and ask the consent of the parents of his loved one. If he expected a refusal, he was a fool to court it. But if it possible that some poor boy would not know he was frowned upon until he had put his suit to the test. But "if he had not consulted the parents of the girl a penalty of price was imposed, and after his assent to it the girl was given him in wedlock."

"Doubtless, the penalty or price was regarded as terhatu, or bride price, and formed the basis of a contract, which was then drawn up." (Clay.) "In such cases the young men having little or no means doubtless simply assented to the amount specified. Even at the present time in Syria the amount paid and given to the girl, which with a like sum from her father forms the dowry when the contract is made, may only be a portion of what is agreed upon. The balance of the price is paid to the wife in the event of a divorce."

nation which would swallow that would swallow anything." Now that the war is over, it is evident that Mr. Dilnot thinks America has swung back slightly toward her old attitude, though he is too cautious to say so, and though he properly lays emphasis on the greatly improved feeling toward his country.

The war has had two effects on the relations of the Dominions with the old country. On the one hand, it has increased their pride in and loyalty to the flag they fought under; on the other, it has increased the feeling of nationalism among them. They are nations now in fact as well as in name. Mr. Dilnot treats of several other features of "the new England," but they are of less importance than those discussed in this review.

Science Queries And Answers

BY EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN
(Director of Mt. Lowe Observatory)

Do all suns have worlds, or planets revolving around them, as is the case with our sun?—J. S. Bentley, Rochester.

This is utterly unknown; for if all suns have worlds revolving around them they are invisible even on the sensitive plates in the focal plane of the huge 100-inch mirror on Mount Wilson, here in southern California. For the faint suns themselves tax the limit of visibility in the largest telescope ever made. If the reader be shown a negative that had been exposed for hours in the Wilson telescope he would strain his eyes even with the aid of a microscope to see the exceedingly minute points projected by the 20th and 21st magnitude suns. These points are smaller than points of the finest sewing needles; yet each may be of a sun larger than our own, and it is 1,310,000 times larger than the earth.

A mirrow 500 inches in diameter could not see worlds in revolution around even the nearest sun to ours, for worlds do not emit light. And the nearest sun is 25,500,000,000,000 miles away.

It is reasonable to infer that all of the three billion suns have planets and satellites revolving around them, but this is not science. To be scientific the worlds must be actually seen and be seen to revolve. "Reasonable" is not in the same class with proof. For nothing else in existence can hope to compare with it, for proof comes under the head of a very peculiar word—truth.

There are 1,750,000,000 humans now living on earth. And among them, taken as a whole, the remarkable word truth may as well be written in cuneiform or hieroglyphics. Truth is in possession of a very few indeed among the millions of humans. And when it appeared along toward the end of the first million and a half period of years of man's existence on earth it was opposed with the most vindictive and bitter opposition. There are those living now in possession of truth, so valuable that all human imagination is surpassed when striving to think of its precious value; but they keep it among themselves in ironclad secrecy, for if given out a mighty cry of opposition would rise.

Many Changes In Mail Relations

Madrid, October 10 (Associated Press).—Changes of sweeping importance in the postal relations of the world will be effected as a result of the deliberations of the international Postal Union Congress during the last week. Several committees dealing with various subjects have drafted heir reports, which must be submitted to the full General Committee and thereafter to the whole Congress for final approval, but as they in most cases fairly represent the views of all delegates, their reports are virtually certain of acceptance.

The notable items on which the committees will report favorably are:

1. The establishment of international payments for the transit of mails on a gold dollar basis.

2. The fixing of an increased maximum rate for postage on international mail, but with the proviso that the United States and other countries may retain the present rates or fix their rates according to their own ideas so long as they do not exceed the maximum accepted by the union.

3. In future congresses only parent countries will have voting power, colonies being excluded from voting, although they may send delegates.

4. The creation of a Pan American Postal Federation.

There was a long discussion over payment for the transit of mails owing to the extreme variation in money values in European countries, but the delegates agreed that some firm basis must be chosen and the gold dollar was adopted.

The Eastern and Western hemispheres were sharply divided on the international rate increase, the Americas opposing it on the ground that it was calculated to injure commercial interests and was unnecessary for revenue. The new maximum rate had not been fixed by the committee, and seeing the firm stand of the Americans, the committee finally accepted the position that the Western hemisphere could fix its own rates if they did not exceed the maximum eventually adopted by the union.

A far-reaching decision was arrived at by the United States and South and Central America with reference to future postal arrangements. The representatives of the republics of the Western Hemisphere, with the exception of Venezuela, nominated an executive committee for the creation of a Pan American Postal Federation, to include every republic on the western side of the Atlantic.

The new organisation, it is announced, will begin to function after the congress at Buenos Aires in August, 1921.

(b) Rhasodie: "Espana" E. Chabrier
4.—Air: "Love and Music" from the Opera "La Tosca" Puccini.
Soloist: Miss S. Troutneff
5.—Two Pieces from Suite "Piemonte" Leone Sinigaglia
(a) "Through fields and woods" (Solitary voices come along the slopes of the flowery hills, greeting from sunrise till evening the return of spring, a bunch of simple and tender tunes breathing all the perfume of the fields and woods that gave them birth).
(b) "A Rustic Dance" (Merry, my lads! Play up a tune, musicians! Flute, violin, trumpet, and guitar are ready in the rustic summer-house. The dance begins, now delicately restrained, now with lively animation. How sweet it is to go through old and new country dances on a mild summer-evening, when the shadows fall, in the light of the rising moon).
